“His father, the late Nelson Adams, was a prominent business man in Bedford in the ante-railroad days; his mother, a woman of culture and refinement. An only son, carefully reared, and with scholarly instincts and aspirations, he graduated as B. C. L. at McGill University, Montreal, in 1867, and was admitted to the bar. A fine professional career was within his grasp. He put it aside for commercial life, became a successful business man in Minneapolis, later in Milwaukee, and finally in Chicago. After the death of his wife his failing health sent him back to his native land where during his remaining years, a devoted mother and an equally devoted son, cared for, comforted and consoled one another until his death at their home at St. Catherine St., West, in Montreal.”

Mr. Adams served four years in office work in the law office of the late Sir J. J. C. Abbott, late Premier of Canada. Before his decease he rendered the Compiler more assistance in locating descendants of Dr. Jonas⁶ Abbott, than all the other descendants in his branch of the family together; and in consequence, it is one of the most complete of any of the many different branches of the family.

From 1835 to 1840 he served as Assistant-surgeon in the Texan Army during the war between Texas and Mexico for Independence of the former, after which he went to New Orleans, La., but owing to ill health, after a time went to the West India Islands, then returned to Granby, where he practiced medicine several years, and finally settled in the practice of his profession at Hochelaya, a suburb of Montreal. For many years he was in the service of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria, as Surgeon of the Volunteer Militia Rifle Company, in Granby. He was justice of the peace, school commissioner, strongly conservative in politics, frequently addressing assemblies in favor of his party, a mem. of the Episcopal Ch., church warden, delegate to the Annual Synod, and leader of the choir for many years. Both he and his wife largely identified themselves with church work, each, says a Montreal paper, "Being endowed with musical talents of no mean order, which they were ever ready to devote to the service of God." He was president of the Mechanics Institute, often giving lectures on scientific and literary subjects, and was "frequently referred to in debates and disputed questions." In early life he received a thorough French and English education, and, says a kinsman, "Was acknowledged as a man of more than ordinary ability and talent." He resided for about fifteen years in Hochelaya, where he d. Jan. 16, 1885, in his 77th year. Says a local paper: "Dr. Abbott had for a long time prior to his death cherished a wish to publish some reminiscences of his early days and old colleagues, but this he was never permitted to do, owing to his long-continued illness." He was kind, gentle, and patient, and greatly endeared himself to all his friends. His widow resides in Hochelaya, where she teaches a parish school.

BENJAMIN WRIGHT⁷ ABBOTT (David,⁶ Jonathan,⁵ Obed,⁴ George,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Rome, Oneida Co., N. Y., Apr. 2, 1797, and m. in Milan, Erie Co., O., July 11, 1838, Lorena, b. in Woodbury, Litchfield Co., Ct., Sept. 2, 1816, dau. of Asa and Sally (Minor) Judson, of Woodbury. He d. in Milan, May 6, 1854, ae. 62, and she in W. Salem, Lacrosse Co., Wis., Sept. 2, 1868, ae. 52 yrs. Their remains were interred at Milan. He lived with a maternal uncle and studied in Rochester, N. Y., till 1809, when he joined his parents on the homestead farm at Milan, which he afterwards inherited, where he remained a farmer till his death. The homestead buildings were built on the most sightly spot in the neighborhood, the view from which is unsurpassed. After Benjamin's death the place was sold to a club, the bridge across the river being named Abbott bridge.

In 1827 he built a schooner, which he named for his mother, Mary Abbott. The following year he loaded it with produce, sailed via Lake Erie for Buffalo, unshipped the masts, went through the Erie Canal to N. Y. City, discharged the cargo, secured another and returned to Milan, it being the only sailing vessel that ever navigated the lake and canal to N. Y. and back.* He was a member of the Committee to improve the harbor at the mouth of Huron River, 1823, and doubtless held other local offices, but no data to that effect have been supplied. He contributed liberally to the M. E. Ch. in Milan, his wife's brother being for a time pastor.

LORENZO⁷ ABBOTT (Moses,⁶ Jonathan,⁵ Obed,⁴ George,³ George,² George¹) was b. in W. Brookfield, Worcester Co., Mass., Jan. 12, 1802, and m. in Seneca Co., O., 1825, Jeanette, b. in N. J., Nov. 24, 1809, dau. of William D. and Martha (Allen) Sherwood, of Clinton Tp., Seneca Co., O. He lived several years in Clinton, but finally settled at Ft. Seneca, Seneca Co., where both he and his wife d., he, Sept. 19, 1876, ae. 74, and she, 1874, ae. 68 yrs. Their remains were interred in Pleasant Union Cemetery, Pleasant Tp. He made the various moves with his parents till they settled in Ohio, 1822, and at an early day, when the country was a dense forest infested by Indians, wolves, etc., was mail-carrier from Milan, Huron (now Erie) Co. to Truxville, Richland Co., O. He was a farmer till 1836, and afterwards, till 1864, a merchant; was Co. commissioner 6 yrs., justice of the peace in Pleasant Tp. 18 yrs., treasurer of the same 25 yrs. and was a Whig and Republican.

About 1828 he had an exciting adventure with Peter Pork, a desperate Seneca Indian, whom he had to arrest at night for stabbing a settler. He was assisted by his bro. Jonathan, who carried the torch, and by a Mr. Hurlbert. On entering Peter's hut after arriving at the Indian village, the glare of the torch awoke his squaw, who jumped from bed with Peter's hunting knife and ran away. He was told to get up and dress, and while doing so made an attempt to seize his tomahawk, but was prevented by Lorenzo. In the struggle, Peter grabbed for his knife, not knowing it was gone, and finally succeeded in getting a sharp "knife-shaped" stick, with which in the struggle, he stabbed Hurlbert in the head, wounding him quite severely. With Hurlbert's assistance Lorenzo threw the Indian, bound his hands, tied him to a pony, took him to Tiffin, confined him in a log jail, and from thence he was sent to the penitentiary at Columbus. Abbott's first child was b. in Clinton Tp., and the other children at Ft. Seneca.

William Buttrick, the emigrant, was probably the ancestor of all bearing the name of Buttrick in N. E. for many decades. He settled in Concord, Mass., in 1635, gave his deposition regarding the purchase of the town site from the Indians, served the town many yrs. honorably as Serg. and petitioned, at the age of 65, to be relieved from the office.† Maj. John Buttrick was one of the officers in command of the militia at Concord on Apr. 19, 1775, and his name, says Shattuck, "Will be handed down to posterity with distinguished honors for the noble stand he took, and the bravery he manifested in leading a gallant band of militia-men on to meet the invading enemy at the North Bridge, and for beginning the first forcible resistance of British arms. He then returned the fire by commanding his company to fire, saying, 'Fire, fellow-soldiers, for God's sake, fire!' and discharged his own gun the same instant." The following epitaph is engraved on his monument:—

"In memory of | Colonel John Buttrick, | who commanded the militia companies | which made the first attack upon | The British Troops. | at Concord North Bridge. | on 19th April, 1775. | Having with patriotic firmness. | shared in the dangers which led to | American Independence. | He lived to enjoy the blessings of it. | and died May 16, 1791, aged 60 years. | Having laid down his sword | with honor, | He resumed the plough | with industry: | by the latter to maintain | what the former had won. | The virtues of the parent, citizen and Christian | advanced his life, | and his worth was acknowledged by | the grief and respect of all ranks | at his death."‡

one of the party who left Northampton, whom Mr. Abbott had faithfully nursed on shipboard after leaving the Isthmus, and who had d. at Dr. Shuler's shortly after arriving in San Francisco. A letter from Dr. Orange Clark of that city, once rector of St. John's Ch. in Northampton, to the P. M. of the latter place, which the Compiler has seen, mentions Mr. Abbott in eulogistic terms. He was not only faithful and devoted in time of need, but was a good man, had a beautiful character, and endeared himself to all who knew him. He and his wife were members of the Congl. Ch., Northampton. He was a painter and paper hanger.

His wid. m. (2d), Jan. 20. 1853, Levi Henry, b. in Northampton, Nov. 22, 1820, second son of Levi and Jane (Marshall) Elwell, of Northampton, where he d. Her eldest son by the same marriage, Levi Heny Elwell, is a Professor in Amherst College. Harvard Univ. uses his Sanskrit book for beginners. Mrs. Elwell is remarkably well preserved for her years, and a most interesting correspondent. She has been untiring, rendering more assistance in locating living descendants of Elijah Abbott, and supplying data for use in the compilation of this Register, than any other connected with the family by marriage only. Although she received but eight months' schooling, her letters are models in the art of composition, spelling and punctuation, and show her splendid good sense and enviable disposition. The Compiler and the descendants of Elijah Abbott, are under many obligations to her for her invaluable services.

He was an enterprising, influential farmer, active, a good business man, jovial and, as a kinsman writes, "At peace with himself and all the world." He was also a potash manufacturer, kept a store, owned a sawmill, and was justice of the peace.

The family had a private burying ground on the homestead, but when it was about to pass out of the hands of the descendants, the remains were disinterred in the spring of 1863, and re-interred in the Westfall cemetery, near "Twelve Corners," about a mile away. On removing from the grave the remains of the subject of this sketch, it

He was an honest, steady, and upright man. Mrs. Beegle was orphaned at 4 yrs. of age; was much of a recluse and even in childhood spent much time in writing poetry. When quite young she was chased by a mad dog, and while wading a stream to escape, came near being swept over a water-fall forty feet high. She is now (1895) in her 84th yr., and a large portion of the data for this work from the fifth to the eleventh generation in her line of descent has been supplied by her in her own handwriting. After a long and exceedingly interesting correspondence, the Compiler has found hers one of the brightest and best preserved intellects of any of the elderly members of the family, her fund of reminiscence, and quaint, entertaining recital being incomparable. Several meritorious poems, written in youth, middle and old age, are before the Compiler, but for want of space it will be impracticable to publish any of them in this work. Lemuel⁵ Lee was son of Col. Benjamin⁴ and Mary (Ely) Lee, of Lyme, who was a Captain in the expedition against Louisburg, in 1745, the tenth child of John³ and Elizabeth (Smith) Lee, of Lyme, son of Lieut. Thomas² and Sarah (Kirtland) Lee, who sailed for New England in 1641, with his parents, Thomas¹ and — (Brown) Lee. The elder Thomas d. on the voyage. Thomas² was one of the original settlers and largest proprietors of Lyme,† Ensign in the train-band, and afterwards Lieutenant.

Mrs. Abbott was a finely educated, accomplished, Christian woman of much ability and specially gifted in prayer. She d. in Akron, N. Y., Oct. 6, 1847, ae. 43 yrs. He m. (3d), 1856, in Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Caroline Ide, with whom he lived until he d. in Chicago, Ill., Nov. 23, 1868, ae. 76 yrs.

Mr. Abbott was brought up on a farm. The first white cotton shirt he ever had he bought with the money he received before he was 20 yrs. old, for slashing an acre of timber land. He served in the militia three months in the War of 1812, and then re-enlisted for three years in the 23d Regt., U. S. Inf., and was in every important battle on the Canadian frontier, save Lundy's Lane, when he was detailed as one of the body-guard to Gen. Brown. Mr. Abbott had "bullets shot through his clothing and hair, had men shot in his rear, on either side, and one, an officer, who stepped in front of him to give orders, but he was never even slightly wounded."‡ At the time Fort Erie was blown up, General Brown called for volunteers to take the fort by entering through a secret passage, and Abbott was one of the first to respond. As he was hurrying past the General, he stopped him, more than enough having volunteered: but as Abbott had been the first to respond, the General gave him permission to proceed. While endeavoring to overtake the others he accidentally spilled some of his cartridges, and the General again kindly stopped him.‡ The storming party had no more than entered the fort before it was blown up, and thus strangely, his life was doubtless preserved. During the armistice following the battle of Fort Erie, Abbott was looking for his missing bro. John, when "a Sergeant with a squad of men under arms boldly paraded the field for drill. The challenge was accepted, and a British cannon ball badly wounded one of the party and the others rushed for cover. Abbott, however, hastened to the unfortunate man, and finding he had lost a leg, with great presence of mind, compressed the bleeding artery, and carried him into the Fort.* Twenty or more years after, he met a one-legged minister at a ministerial convention, who related this incident as his awakening experience. Mr. Abbott served as Chaplain of the 98th Regt., N. Y. S. N. G., 133 days, with the hundred-day men in 1864.†

George Abbott, M. D., his eldest son, in writing of him to the Compiler, says:

"He was naturally of a serious and contemplative turn of mind. Wm. Hodge in his historical reminiscences of Buffalo, N. Y., speaking of its early ministrations, mentions the conversion of Rev. Orrin Abbott, who, he says, 'while a soldier in the War of 1812, and walking his beat at Fort Erie, in the dead of a starlight night, became so engaged in thinking of God, and his own individual nothingness, that he received into his mind and heart that high and new comprehension of truth which he believed to be a "change of heart," and he then and there became a converted man, and dedicated himself to the ministry.'

"He joined the church of his fathers, and was ordained a Baptist preacher, but afterwards changed his belief and became a member of the Genesee M. E. Conference. His early circuits were often large, requiring him to preach almost daily and to study as he rode. He was a great student not only of the Bible but of history, the sciences, Greek and Latin. He held numerous debates both public and through religious journals with the most eminent Universalist, Calvinist and Baptist divines of his day, including Alexander Campbell. He was an extensive writer on theological subjects, and his treatises were too logical and profound to admit of successful contradiction. He was a great singer, having an exceedingly strong and melodious voice, a powerful preacher, a natural orator, wonderfully successful, and much sought after to assist in protracted or revival meetings.

"Notwithstanding his ministerial labors, he accumulated considerable property, and in the early thirties was regarded a man of wealth, but the financial revolution of 1837 caught him unprepared, and his property was swept away. He was advised to take the benefit of the Bankruptcy Act, but looking upon it as liable to injure his ministerial character, he refused, and thus remained a financial wreck the remainder of his days."

He joined the Masons early in the nineteenth century, but his lodge was swept down in the Morgan excitement and he never rejoined any other, though he afterwards sat in lodge as an ancient Mason. He was a pioneer Son of Temperance, and one of the committee to draft its constitution and by-laws; was a Whig, then a Know Nothing and finally a Republican; and was always a strong man. He was gifted in invention. "In 1820, by the introduction of the turning lathe, he and his brothers revolutionized the methods of constructing grindstones, which had previously been done with a pick only." About 1839, he constructed an incubator, and demonstrated that chickens could be artificially hatched. He also invented the ratchet handle, or lever, so universally in use on farming implements; a corn-planter, a garden-seed sower, a wheat-drill, a method of heating houses by steam pipes, etc. Having lost his property as previously stated, and being in poor health, he never secured any pecuniary gain for these inventions, but left them as legacies to all mankind.*

† On the back of his discharge from service in the Civil War, is the following, written by the U. S. Mustering Officer:—

"This venerable Chaplain, a soldier of 1812, one of the memorable ones who volunteered, at the call of General Wadsworth, to cross the Niagara, one of General Brown's body-guard at the battle of Lundy's Lane, and one who braved the siege of Fort Erie, came forth in this call to render perhaps his last service to the flag he so dearly loved and faithfully served."

But I would do more for humanity, more for the poor, the down-trodden, the sorrowful; and may the good Father give me strength and wisdom so to arrange life's remaining days that the heart which has always yearned to help the fallen and the oppressed may yet have a full realization of much having been accomplished."

Nathaniel Lucas and Caroline (Leffingwell) Moore, of Niles, the bride's father being the officiating clergyman. Capt. Abbott spent most of his boyhood in Richfield and Niles. When of age he went to Ohio, where, in company with his brothers Reuben and Levi, they built a saw-mill on the Cuyahoga River, a few miles south of Cleveland. After running it a few years he sold out and returned to Niles where he soon married. About 1836 he moved to North Fairfield, Huron Co., O., where he cleared a heavily timbered farm and lived nine years. In the fall of 1845, he moved with his family to Dexter, Washtenaw Co., Mich., where he manufactured potash. In the autumn of 1847, he moved to Reading, Hillsdale Co., Mich., where he located in the midst of the wilderness and cleared another farm. In 1850, he went with his youngest son, Clement Henry, to a farm in Cambria, Mich., and finally, in 1882, moved with him again to a farm at Fremont Centre, Mich., where he d. whom was Capt. Abbott, met one day by agreement, and forming a circle around a forest, closed on the centre, driving all the game before them, when a general slaughter occurred and afterwards a barbecue. A large amount of game was killed, including bears, wolves, deer, panthers, and much small game. Capt. Abbott was a Baptist, a whig, and Republican, and held commissions as Lieut. and Capt. in the 109th N. Y. State Militia. He was a very conscientious man, cared little for creeds, lived a consistent life, and never indulged to excess in strong drink or used profane language. CAPT. THATCHER⁷ ABBOTT (Daniel,⁶ John,⁵ John,⁴ John,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Exeter, Otsego Co., N. Y., Nov. 3, 1804, and m. in Hamburg, Erie Co., N. Y., Jan. 4, 1831, Prudence Whitaker, of Hamburg. He d. in New Buffalo, Berrien Co., Mich., Aug. 7, 1838, ae. 33, and she in Chicago, Aug. 29, 1855, ae. 49 yrs. Capt. Abbott lived in Exeter, till 1810, and in Hamburg, till 1836, when he went to New Buffalo, where he d. two years later. He was engaged in farming till he moved to Michigan, with the exception of a few years spent on Lake Erie as mate and then captain of a schooner. He traded for furs extensively with Indians with whom, being a very honorable and conscientious man, he was a great favorite. His daughter Miss Mary Abbott, an aged lady of the old school, now (1896) living in Hamburg, N. Y., writes that the people of the frontier used to say of Capt. Abbott that no one could buy furs of the Indians as well as he, being an ideal man for them to deal with, and one to whom they always appealed to settle their troubles. On one occasion when a number of Indians were talking business with Capt. Abbott, one of them handed him a ten-cent handkerchief, for which some white man had been paid a dollar, and on being told of the imposition was dissatisfied. Capt. Abbott took the handkerchief and threw it on the floor, thereby indicating that to cheat an Indian in such a way was a contemptible trick, and then handed the malcontent a silver dollar. Capt. Abbott was known among them as "Chamook (white) man hunter," and often hunted with them, never having any trouble. After his death the chief of the tribe went to the home of his widow, sat for some time with bared head and tearful eye, and finally left the house without uttering an audible word, only bowing his head in reply to questions, not daring, so grieved was he, to speak. Three days after, he sent the widow the tenderloin of a young deer, that being a mark of the highest respect for the dead.

1297 Martha Caroline Hephzibah⁸ Abbott, b. Sept. 18, 1819; m. May 9, 1837, Samuel Belcher, of Farmington, b. Dec. 8, 1814.

The Belcher family is probably of Norman descent but members of it have lived in England from a very early period. During the reign of Henry VIII, Edmund Belcher resided at Guilsborough, in Northamptonshire. Northoft, a hamlet of nineteen houses, was granted to his son, Alexander Belcher, Gent. Early in the seventeenth century, four members of the family came to America; Jeremiah settled in Ipswich, Mass., Edward became a resident of Boston, Andrew was the ancestor of Governor Belcher, and Gregory was an early settler and an original member of the First Church of Quincy. The relationship existing between the members of the foregoing families is unknown to the Compiler. Gregory Belcher was the ancestor of the Farmington family, and must have been a man of some prominence in Boston, as he was one of the founders of the Old South Church. His son Edward Belcher settled at Stoughton, and Clifford Belcher, the youngest of his six children, married, June 24, 1740, Mehitable, dau. of Samuel and Sarah (Clap) Bird, and gr.-dau. of John and Elizabeth (Williams) Bird, of Dorchester. He resided in ancient Stoughton where he owned a large estate, until his death, Apr. 26, 1773. The family has been very prominent in Farmington, and elsewhere. Among those of note was Capt. Supply Belcher, of Augusta, but afterwards of the Sandy River township, where he took the foremost rank among the early settlers. He was the first town clerk, and the second justice of the peace; was the first Rep. to the G. C., 1798; was again Rep. 1801 and 1809, and was selectman in 1796-7. He was for many years a popular and successful school and music teacher, possessed a good knowledge of medicine and surgery, and at an early day, before the arrival of a physician, his services were of great value to the early settlers. A son, Samuel Belcher, was a popular educator of considerable celebrity, and his bro. Maj. B. M. Belcher, was an efficient and popular officer of militia. He lived on the homestead and was selectman, 1822-3-4. Another son of Supply Belcher was Hiram, who resided in Farmington, and was an able lawyer, well known throughout Maine. Timothy F. Belcher was a banker and had a son who grad. from Phillips Acad., Andover, Mass., 1878, and from Bowd. Coll., 1882, and was a lawyer. Hannibal Belcher was also a lawyer; Lt.-Col. on Gov. Kent's staff, 1841, 1855; Maj.-Gen. of a Div. of Me. militia; Int. Rev. Assessor, 1862 to 1869, and was a mem. of the Gov's. Council, 1860. He m. a descendant "in double line from John Alden."* The Abbott-Belcher marriage alliances have been Hon. Nehemiah⁷ Abbott and Caroline Williams Belcher; Prof. Alexander Hamilton⁸ Abbott and M. Mittie Belcher; and Martha Caroline Hephzibah⁸ Abbott and Judge Samuel Belcher.

"on account of physical disability from wounds received in action"; served in Army of Potomac: was in the Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Mine Run, Wilderness, and Spottsylvania C. H. campaigns; and was slightly wounded at Fredericksburg. While covering the retreat of the First Corps, after the first day's fight at Gettysburg, after his regiment had lost all but about forty of its men by the casualties of war, he won enviable fame by directing them to cut its battle-flag in pieces and distribute the parts among the survivors, that it might not be captured by the enemy. He commanded the left wing of his regiment and with it was taken pris. of war, but while en route to Libby Prison, escaped and made his way back to the Union lines. After his return, having no command, he was appointed aide-de-camp on staff of General Heintzelman. In the battle of the Wilderness, May 8, 1864, his skull was pierced by a bullet, which for 17 dys. rested on the brain, when it was extracted. Capt. Belcher did not fully recover from the effects of this wound until the close of the war, when he again resumed his law practice in Farmington, where he now lives. He was nominated Rep. to U. S. Cong. by the Democrats, 1876 and Moody, of Reading, Me.† Mr. Abbott grad. Bowd.] Coll., 1836, studied law in Calais, Me., and engaged in practice in Columbus, Miss., but after two years, the climate not agreeing with him, he returned to Maine as law partner of his brother Hon. Nehemiah⁷ Abbott, in Belfast. The purpose which he formed while a law student, when he was led to embrace the faith of the gospel, but which was hindered for pecuniary reasons, he was able to carry out in 1847, when, abandoning a lucrative law practice, he devoted himself to the ministry in the M. E. Ch., in which he labored with characteristic singleness of aim and energy and with marked success. He preached in Kennebunk, Me., was the eighth pastor of the Congress St. Ch., Portland, and also preached in Augusta, Me. He owned a home in Waterville, Me., where he d. Feb. 2, 1876, ae. 65 yrs. A nephew speaks of him thus:

* Portland, Me., Rec.

† Hist. of Portland, Me.

"He did not preach in the common acceptation of the term. His sermons were of a colloquial character. He just talked from the pulpit, and his talks were wonderfully effective. I heard him often, and have a very vivid remembrance of him. His great black eyes would glow with enthusiasm as he painted the delights of the Christian life. He was a wonderful word-painter. He died a martyr to the cause, having fairly worn himself out striving for the good of his fellow-men."

REV. *Amos*⁷ Abbott (Jeremiah,⁶ Chloe,⁵ Zebadiah,⁴ Nehemiah,³ George,² *George*¹) was b. in Wilton, Hillsborough Co., N. H., June 2, 1812, and m. there May 12, 1834, Anstice, b. in Salem (?), Mass., Feb. 3, 1812, dau. of Capt. David and Elizabeth (Barker) Wilson, of Wilton. They both d. at the home of their dau. Mrs. Chloe Evans, in Ryde, Isle of Wight, Eng., he, Apr. 24, 1889, ae. 76, and she, July 29, 1889, ae. 77 yrs. When about sixteen, Mr. Abbott attended Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., intending to fit for college, but at the end of a year ill health obliged him to return home. Subsequently he resolved to become a teacher, and after qualifying himself at Andover for that purpose, offers of various situations were made him, and he accepted one from the A. B. C. F. M., as supt. of schools of the Mahratta Mission in India. Soon after his marriage he and his wife sailed, May 23, 1834, from Boston, in the bark Corvo for Bombay.

"After a voyage of four months they reached their destination and pursued their journey by land to Ahmednuggur, a mission station 170 miles in the interior. Upon their arrival they found a Mahratta school for boys, and also an English school. After nine months' study of the people and their language, Mr. and Mrs. Abbott drew up a system for the management of the schools and the pay of the teachers, and started several schools in Ahmednuggur and the vicinity. In the autumn of 1835 they organized a normal boarding school, called the Boys' Seminary, in which Mrs. Abbott had charge of the boys' clothing and the religious teaching of the mothers who brought their food. She also superintended the girls' school. Mr. Abbott taught personally in the boys' school. . . . The system was continued fourteen years with some variations. While thus engaged in teaching and in superintending the schools, time was taken for studying the language and for preparing school books and religious tracts in the native language, some of which are still extant; the arithmetic has been in use in mission schools for more than forty years. In 1846 Mr. Abbott was licensed as a preacher, but ill health compelled him and his wife, with their five children, to return to America in 1847, and to seek release from the American Board. Contrary to expectation, Mr. Abbott's health improved, and he engaged during several years in canvassing for the Bible Society, in teaching, and in domestic missions in Portsmouth, Manchester, and elsewhere in his native State.

"With re-established health, and a yearning to return to the former missionary field, came urgent invitations to them from the missionaries and native Christians, and with the approbation of the Prudential Committee, they went to Andover (in 1856-7), where Mr. Abbott attended the Theological Seminary one year, and was then ordained in Portsmouth as a foreign missionary. Mr. and Mrs. Abbott then returned to India, taking with them their four younger children, and leaving three older ones in America. Their eldest daughter, E. Augusta, had married Rev. S. C. Dean, and had joined the Mahratta Mission several months before. The parents on returning to India, chose for the centre of their field of labor Rahuri, a village about twenty-four miles north of Ahmednuggur. They were placed in charge of a church, and were mostly engaged in teaching and preaching there and in the surrounding district. Four more churches were soon organized, and thus they were in charge of five churches, some of which had native preachers and pastors over them. In 1867 . . . Mr. Abbott and family left Rahuri and took charge of the Satara field and its out-stations. Here there were two churches and several schools with native assistants. In 1869 the ill health of both Mr. and Mrs. Abbott again compelled them to return to America and to seek release from the Board. After their second return, Mr. Abbott, to increase his medical knowledge, went through a course of study in the medical college in Philadelphia, received a diploma, and in 1874 they removed to Nebraska. Subsequently they took up their abode with a married daughter in the Isle of Wight, England."*

During his last years his favorite pastime was mathematics. He was at work on logarithmic tables the week of his death. When over 70 years of age, he learned the German language, in order to read certain scientific works. He was also of an inventive turn of mind.

Rufus' Abbot, M. D. (Zebadiah,⁶ Chloe,⁵ Zebadiah,⁴ Nehemiah,³ George,² *George*¹) was b. on "Abbot Hill," Wilton, Hillsborough Co., N. H., Apr. 17, 1807, maternal gr.-son of Lieut. Joseph Hale, and great-nephew of Capt. Nathan Hale, of Rev. War fame, and m. in Greensburg, Ky., Apr. 20, 1838, Mary B. Aiken, who d. there Oct. 19, 1838, ae. 31 yrs. He m. (2d), at Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 21, 1840, Mary Rebecca, b. in Albemarle Co., Va., Feb. 29, 1824, dau. of Capt. Samuel F. and Ann Taylor (Curd) Hart, of Va. They both d. at Pleasant Hill, Cass Co., Mo., he, Jan. 12, 1873, ae. 65, and she, Feb. 13, 1876, ae. 51 yrs.

Dr. Abbot studied two years at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H., three years at Dartmouth College, and one year at Yale College, graduating from the latter, 1833. He then taught school, studied and practiced medicine in Greensburg, several years, and graduated M. D. from the Louisville, Ky., Medical College, 1839. After this he practiced medicine and was the owner of a drug store in Jefferson City, seven years, when he located in Callaway Co., Mo., where he farmed and practiced medicine ten years. He then moved, 1856, to Fulton, Mo., where he practiced his profession, and in 1863 was appointed asst. supt., and afterwards supt. of the Missouri State Insane Asylum. This position he resigned for political reasons, 1867, when he moved to Pleasant Hill, where he died a few years later.

Dr. Abbot was a strong Union man during the Civil War, which, in the neighborhood where he was located, means a great deal more than one unfamiliar with the situation on the border between the North and South at that time can realize. He was not in the Army, but was appointed attending Surgeon of the Union forces of the Post of Fulton, and was left in charge of soldiers unable to move with their commands. At one time, after a skirmish at Moore's Mill, there being no place to take the wounded, he had them brought to his house, where he and his good wife, who was a woman of strong intellect, liberal culture, and literary taste, nursed them.

Dr. Abbot was a member of the Congl. Ch., Wilton, but in the absence of such where he was in Kentucky, he united with the Presby. Ch. He was a Ch. mem. for forty, and a ruling elder thirty years. He was for many years one of the board of trustees of Westminster College, Fulton, which he helped to establish and foster. A city paper mentions him as having been "a learned, judicious and successful physician, decided in his opinions, firm in executing his designs, and punctual in the discharge of duty." (Data by a daughter.)

finally settled, 1825, in Westfield. The following is from the Western Hampden Times at the time of his death :

“ We cannot suffer such a man as Dr. Abbott to pass away from our midst without some word of comment. Although not a native of this town, he has spent nearly one half of a century in it. His life has been a useful one. . . . He has been an attentive, faithful, kind, and affectionate physician. He took a deep interest in his patients, and interested himself not only in their bodily diseases, but in their pecuniary welfare.

“ Dr. Abbott always took an interest in the affairs of the town. He entered into the chief subjects of interest with activity and zeal. Opposition did not daunt or deter him. If the thing which enlisted him was only right, he engaged in it, heart and soul; and his practical mind brought an accumulation of facts to support his reasonings.

"In the greater part of his life he was in a political minority, and he was always a most decided man. His opponents respected his honesty, and honored him for his truth. He served two terms in the Senate (State) and distinguished himself for his faithful labor and political honesty. When the revenue law was enacted, the assessor for this district appointed Dr. Abbott a deputy in this town. How faithful he has been the people know. One thing may be said of him, and said truly—he was an honest officer. Fraud was not coupled with his name. He has been in large business, has had ample opportunity for doing what so many men yield to, when temptation invites; but he went out of this world a poor man, and with the reputation of an honest one. When a good man dies, the people mourn. . . ."

He was collector of taxes in Westfield, 1830-1-2-3-4; mem. of the school com., 1836-7; town physician, 1857-8-9-60; justice of the peace, 1867, and mem. of the com., 1869, to adopt the report of the com. recommending what measures should be taken to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the town of Westfield. His will is dated Jan. 16, 1872, and the exrs. named in it are his wid. Sophia P., and son William A. Abbott. He gave his wid. the use of the house, grounds, effects, etc., where she lived during her life; to son William A. (having been provided for before), he gave as a token of remembrance certain articles from his personal effects; to the Westfield Athenaeum, being much interested in the library, 132 of his medical books; to dau. Fanny, all household effects except a book-case which he gave to his son William A.*

LUTHER DANA⁷ ABBOTT (Alexander,⁶ John,⁵ John,⁴ Nehemiah,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Tolland, Tolland Co., Ct., Mar. 11, 1806, and m. in Haverstraw, Rockland Co., N. Y., Sept. 8, 1830, Mary, b. in N. Y. City, Apr. 9, 1802, dau. of Christopher and Rebecca (Allison) Cosgrove, of N. Y. City and Haverstraw, she being a descendant of James Allison, of Carrnduff, Avondale, Lanark Co., Scotland. They d. in Grandville, Kent Co., Mich., he, July 22, 1856, ae. 50, and she, Oct. 20, 1865, ae. 63 yrs. They both studied at district school, and were each successful teachers before their marriage. He taught for some time in Haverstraw, which is probably where he first met his wife. In his youth he was anxious to attend college and become a minister, but his parents, thinking him less promising for a professional life than the two sons they did send to college, and not feeling able to give all their sons a collegiate education, kept him at home on the farm. The money provided one of the sons for educational purposes was to have been returned after graduation, but his failure to do so came near causing his father to lose his home, which was only prevented by Luther and Ephraim staying with their parents and helping them to carry on the farm.

After his marriage Mr. Abbott lived in Tolland and Coventry, Ct., till 1835; about 1836, they moved to the frontier of Michigan, then a territory, and frequented by Indians and wild animals, and settled in the Grand River Valley at what is now Grandville, about seven miles from the city of Grand Rapids, Mich., which at that time was a hamlet of nine log houses. Mrs. Abbott went by stage from Detroit to Grandville, and while en route near Grand Rapids, crossing the Thornapple River which had been greatly swollen by the spring freshets, the stage upset. With great presence of mind she held on to the overturned coach with one hand while with the other she held Lucy — then a babe in her arms — to keep her from being swept away and drowned; they were finally rescued on the back of one of the horses.

Mr. Abbott was a school inspector, a Whig, a strong temperance man, and a member of the Congl. Ch. He took great interest at an early day and as long as he lived, in building up the religious and educational interests of Kent Co. In the absence of a minister in his native place he frequently supplied the demand, preaching himself for a year at a time; and even after a regular pastor was settled, many preferred Mr. Abbott to officiate at funerals, etc., to anyone else. He was frequently instrumental in bringing the people together on Sundays when he would talk to them from the Bible. He was a man of fine presence, an interesting talker on religious subjects, gifted in prayer, greatly esteemed for his consistent, conscientious life, his strong moral character, and was much lamented at his death. Six of their daus. were school teachers before marriage.

DEA. JOSEPH ADNAH⁷ ABBOTT (Adnah,⁶ Joseph,⁵ John,⁴ Nehemiah,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Shaftsbury, Bennington Co., Vt., Oct. 22, 1793, and m. there, Jan. 21, 1818, Betsey, b. in Shaftsbury, Dec. 26, 1794, dau. of James and Hannah (Wright) Sweet, of Shaftsbury. In early life Dea. Abbott was a weaver, but when about 22 yrs. old bought wild land in western New York, converted it into a farm, became well off and the progenitor of several prosperous and influential families. He purchased this land in Castile, Wyoming Co., N. Y., about 1815, and before his marriage walked from Shaftsbury to his farm — about 300 miles, mostly through the forest — two summers in succession, returning in the fall, in order to clear the land for occupancy when he should marry. During this time he and another man, whose land joined his, built a small log cabin in which they lived and did most of their cooking. At night, after finishing their work, they went a mile through a forest infested with wild animals, to a neighbor's, for their bread and laundry. After obtaining a deed of his land and clearing it, his wife's mother objected so strongly to her daughter's going to the frontier — fearing, if she did, she would never see her again — that he gave up the plan until after their mother's death; in 1839, he settled on the place he had bought and cleared about 24 yrs. before, and remained there till his death, Dec. 21, 1862, ae. 69 yrs. He was for many years a deacon in the Universalist ch. at Perry, Wyoming Co., N. Y., and his pastor frequently said that "Dea. Abbott's presence at communion was a benediction in itself." He was a very conscientious, honest, correct, amiable man, and was often alluded to as a character worthy of imitation for one and all. On one of his summer trips from Vermont to Castile he experienced religion; a letter to him from his mother during that period is full of tender solicitations and good advice, and shows her to have been a saintly, good woman. He was especially admonished so to plan his work that he would not have to break the Sabbath and to remember and keep it holy.

The Batavia, N. Y., deeds show that on May 30, 1827, he bought of Stephen Van Rensselaer, of Albany, N. Y., lot No. 72 of William Shepard's subdivision, Ogden's tract, town of Castile, Genesee (now Wyoming) Co., N. Y., about 50 acs. of land with "appertenances." for $300;* also according to the Warsaw, N. Y., deeds, Apr. 14, 1840, about 50 acs. and "appertenances." in Castile, for $1,400, being lot No. 72 of William Shepard's subdivision, Ogden's tract, said town;† also Nov. 3, 1847, lot No. 72, same subdivision, etc., in Castile, about 50 acs. for $1,250.‡ Mrs. Abbott d. in Castile, July 6, 1868, ae. 73 yrs.

He studied at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H., under his uncle, *Benjamin*⁷ Abbot, LL. D., and about two years at Harv. Univ., entering 1832, and graduating M. D., 1837. He located in practice in Canton, soon after, and remained the only physician there till his death.

"He was affectionate, kindly and generous, ready and hearty in his sympathies, and never sparing himself. Here were just the qualities—physical, mental, and moral—for an accomplished physician. He had a reverential, loving nature, but was reserved and reticent in regard to his feelings. He seldom made any profession of love to God or man, but spent his life in doing what he could to alleviate human suffering. He paid little regard to his own ease or comfort, or to his own personal interests. He was a modest, self-forgetting man, more anxious to render services than to secure a reward. With all his ability and his great and long-continued labor, he took no pains to assert for himself the professional position or reputation which really belonged to him. He thought very little about himself. His bearing toward his professional brethren was marked by a courtesy and deference which showed that there was no touch of jealousy in his nature, and he was generous in his appreciation of those whom he might have looked upon as his rivals. For thirty-five years this man, gifted in an uncommon degree with the intellectual and personal qualities which go to make an accomplished physician, was in a retired country place, cultivating and exercising those qualities by a life of constant and laborious exertion, riding often forty miles a day in his professional duties, and seldom taking so much as a day for his own amusement or recreation. He kept up the best learning of his profession. He studied his cases with conscientious care, and brought to the relief of his patients all that the most recent improvements in medical science could give, and all that he could add to them from his own increasing experience, as well as from a mind of extraordinary sagacity and fertile in all the resources and expedients of professional life."[†]

*Charles Eliot*⁷ Abbot, Esq. (Jacob,⁶ Dorcas,⁵ Abigail,⁴ Nehemiah,³ George,² *George*¹) was b. at Hampton Falls, Rockingham Co., N. H., Nov. 5, 1822, and m. in San Francisco, Cal., May 15, 1867, Susan Folger Osborn, b. in N. Y. City, Sept. 4, 1839, dau. of Homer B. and Sarah J. (Folger) Osborn, of that place and San Francisco. Mrs. Abbot d. in Napa City, Napa Co., Cal., June 4, 1878, æ. 38 yrs. Mr. Abbot was the youngest of eleven children. He was brought up on his father's farm in Windham, N. H., till 22 years of age, except when away at school, received an academic education, was employed 1845-6, on the N. E. Boundary Survey, and kept a country store in Tyngsborough, Mass., till 1848. He left N. Y. City by steamer Feb. 5, 1849, for California, remaining en route on the Isthmus of Panama till March, when, with about 200 others, he took passage on a whaling bark for San Francisco, then only a small village, arriving there June 16, 1849, after 89 days, being much becalmed. He is probably one of the few living who saw the first eight Chinamen who landed on the Pacific Coast, shortly after his arrival. They were brought from China by C. C. Bruce, a native of Boston, Mass.

On July 29, 1849, Mr. Abbot went by schooner to Sacramento arriving the next day, there being then only two wooden buildings there with the usual complement of tents, temporary cotton cloth structures, etc., generally found in new frontier towns at any period. Here he associated himself, for about two years, with two physicians as joint proprietors of a General Hospital, their charges per day for private patients being from $8 to $12, the terms previous to their taking it having been $25 per day. The winter of 1851-2, he spent mining in the Sierra Nevada mountains, Nevada Co., Cal.; kept a hotel in Sacramento the following summer; was burned out Nov. 2, 1852, nearly the entire city being destroyed by fire; lived in Eldorado Co., Cal., 1853 to 1859; was in Sacramento, searching records and furnishing abstracts of titles till 1862; in San Francisco in the real estate business till the fall of 1865; in San Mateo and Eldorado Cos., Cal., quartz mining till 1869; in Elko, Nev., in the lumber and furniture business till 1874; and was mining in Elko Co., 1875-6, since which he has been practicing law and operating in mines in Tuscarora, Elko Co., Nev. He was public administrator of Eldorado Co., 1857 to 1859, and meantime was in several instances appointed guardian of persons and their estates; was elected Minute Clerk of the California State Senate, 1861-2; public administrator of Elko Co., 1873-4; under-sheriff of Elko Co., 1875-6; justice of the peace in Tuscarora, 1877-8-9; notary several times, and while in San Francisco was a member of the Unitarian Ch., 1862 to 1865. and Mrs. Abbot both d. in Cambridge, Mass., he, Apr. 7, 1873, æ. 70. and she, June 26, 1883, æ. 76 yrs. Mr. Abbot studied for college with Rev. Thomas Beede, minister at Wilton, and with his uncle *Abiel*⁶ Abbot, D. D., then principal of Dummer Academy, Byfield, Mass. He grad. from Bowdoin College, 1822, and recd. A. M., standing near the head of his class.

“His going to Brunswick was accidental. He was thinking only of Cambridge, when Mr. John Abbott ‘dropped in.’ He had with him two chaises, and two sisters bound for Maine, and another driver was much wanted. Joseph could perform this service, enter Bowdoin College, stay one year, and then go to Cambridge. So it was decided; and thus, often, are the incidents that give a lasting direction to our lives.*

“After spending some time in Cambridge as a resident graduate at Harvard College, he took charge of a private school in Watertown, in February, 1823. Here he remained till the following autumn. He then took charge of a private Grammar School at Beverly, which he conducted with signal success. From 1825 to 1827, he was tutor and librarian at Bowdoin College, where he taught Latin, French and geometry. He also had a large private class in Spanish.”

The following is from the History of Wilton, N. H. :

“From 1827 to 1833 he was professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at Phillips Exeter Academy, then under the charge of his illustrious kinsman, Benjamin Abbot, LL. D., where he gave experimental lectures in chemistry and natural philosophy, and where he greatly raised and improved the character of the English department. From 1833 to 1859, with some intermissions from impaired health, Mr. Abbot conducted a private school for young ladies in Boston, and gained the highest reputation as an able, conscientious and successful educator. From 1859 to 1860, he was occupied chiefly in preparing scientific definitions for Worcester’s Quarto Dictionary. From 1861 to 1867, he was principal of Beverly High School, and left so deep an impression of his character upon the minds of his pupils, that, on his retirement, they formed the ‘Abbot Association’ which flourished in great usefulness for many years, in order to perpetuate with grateful affection the memory and influence of his wise instructions. From 1867 to 1872, he resided chiefly in Boston, taking a few private pupils and pursuing his favorite studies.

“In 1838, Mr. Abbot was elected a Resident Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, in which he took the deepest interest to the day of his death, and in which he served with distinction as recording secretary from 1850 to 1852, winning golden opinions by the unusual accuracy and fullness of his minutes of scientific discussions and contributions. In October, 1840, he published in Silliman’s Journal, the first complete scientific explanation of the ‘Pneumatic paradox,’ describing new and original experiments of great interest and value. In June, 1848, he published in Littell’s Living Age, an important article on ‘Principles recognized by Scientific Men, applied to the Ether Controversy,’ and in the Atlantic Monthly, June, 1868, another on ‘The Discovery of Etherization.’ He also contributed to the North American Review, October, 1856, a review of ‘Consolations of Solitude,’ a book of poems by Dr. John W. Randall, grandson of Samuel Adams, which deserves to be far more widely known than it is. For the last fifteen years of his life, Mr. Abbot was laboriously preparing an original work on English grammar, incorporating methods and results of a life time of sagacious study; but he did not live to complete it.

“Fifty years of patient, painstaking, conscientious labor as a teacher and scholar — there is little to dazzle the imagination in such a career as that. But the love, respect and veneration of his pupils, many of whom attained great distinction in after-life, and above all the consciousness of duty done, were to him the sweetest of all records. In outward manner grave, dignified and courtly, he speedily won and lastingly retained the hearts of his scholars. Absolute faithfulness, a chivalrous lover of justice, and integrity of the intellect no less than of the life, yet with this an almost womanly tenderness of soul, were the bed-rock of his character. No juster tribute was ever paid than these words of his widow, who for two years survived him: 'Intellectual superiority and moral purity—these were the qualities I first required in my maiden ideal of a life companion; and, looking for these in your father, I was never disappointed." He was "a Unitarian of the old type."

JOHN⁷ ABBOTT (John,⁶ John,⁵ Samuel,⁴ Samuel,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Holden, Worcester Co., Mass., May 24, 1792, own cousin to the father of the Compiler of this work, and m. in Boylston, May 19, 1812, when 19 yrs. old, Cynthia, aged 16 yrs., b. Sept. 16, 1795, dau. of Solomon and Rebecca (Daiken) Flagg, of Boylston, and gr.-dau. of Stephen Flagg.* They lived in Holden till about 1816, when they moved to Peru, Berkshire Co., Mass., and about 1827, to Hinsdale, Mass., where land was cheaper, the country being less thickly settled than in central Massachusetts. He was an expert shoemaker, but owned and cultivated a choice bit of land in Hinsdale, the envy of his neighbors on either side of him, where he remained for about 47 yrs., as long as he lived. He d. Dec. 22, 1874, ae. 82, and she, July 7, 1865, ae. 69 yrs.

Their house was on the principal highway over which the old stage coaches passed from Boston to Albany at an early day, and many worthy people who could not afford to pay the stage fares passed on foot. Notwithstanding the criticism of their neighbors that they would be "eaten out of house and home," Mr. and Mrs. Abbott decided they would set aside one room in their peaceful home for the gratuitous entertainment of such worthy travellers, "by whom they were often thanked with quivering lips and tearful eyes," for such unusual consideration. This custom was followed for many years, Mrs. Abbott often saying in answer to criticism that, "He that pitieth the poor lendeth to the Lord": and she always felt satisfied, so a descendant writes, with the investment. Mr. Abbott was a constant attendant at church, and for twenty-five years was a Sunday School teacher, his class being composed of young men in whom he took much interest, morally, in starting rightly in the world. It was by his advice that his grand-sons, U. S. Senator F. E. Warren, and Lieut. Emerson Bicknell, attended the Hinsdale Academy, both living with him at the time, he offering to board them gratuitously. He was of a very modest and retiring disposition, and like many of the descendants of George^t Abbott, of Rowley, shrank from accepting either town or church office, not from lack of ability, but because he did not care for notoriety, preferring, instead, a quiet life and a peaceful, happy home, in which religious instruction was never neglected, nor in his supplications for Divine help and grace did he ever omit to mention by name each one of his children and gr.-children. It was a great comfort to him in the evening of life to know that many of his Sunday School boys, "whom he had helped to start life morally correct," were occupying positions of trust and influence, and several of them were ministers. Mr. and Mrs. Abbott were both members of the M. E. Church for forty years, were devout, consistent Christians, noted for their moral and religious integrity, which was exemplified by their practical charity to those trying to help themselves, and especially to the young. They were good neighbors, and their practical common sense and kindness of heart made them expert nurses and very helpful in sickness, their services always being voluntarily given. They took great interest in all political, moral and religious reforms.

"At daybreak, July 3d, took much the same position as the day before, Capt. Plummer being on the right with some five or six men, and Lieut. Bicknell commanding the rest on the left and centre. In the afternoon when the Rebels charged the works, Lieut. Bicknell, taking all those who had Sharps rifles, joined in the line of battle against the enemy, and when they wavered and broke, with three penetrated their flying ranks and drove in over 130 as prisoners. Lieut. Bicknell, upon whom the chief command devolved this day, was complimented upon the conduct of the Andrew Sharp Shooters by the General commanding the division." Lieut. Bicknell was severely wounded at the battle of Antietam, "and afterwards suffered from these wounds during his life, which, without doubt, were the direct cause of his death."

1509 Cynthia Estella⁸ Abbott, b. in Peru, Jan. 10, 1825, second cousin to Compiler of this work: d. of consumption in Windsor, Apr. 26, 1859, ae. 34 yrs.; m. in Hinsdale, Feb. 18, 1843, Joseph Spencer Warren, b. in Windsor, Sept. 7, 1824. She was a woman distinguished for quiet and gentle manners, a loving spirit, a truly feminine grace and dignity of character united with nobility of soul and high aims. Her faith which had ever adorned her life and character, and which made her an ideal wife and mother, shed a halo of moral beauty and glory around the final years of her life, her greatest and never-ceasing care being the welfare of her children. Long before her premature death her mind was constantly fixed on their future, and, says Bancroft in his Chronicles of the Builders, "Speaking to them as one already on the threshold of another world, she gave such counsel as could not fail to guide them aright whatever their career in life." She was a Methodist.

Mr. Warren married at the age of nineteen, and, says Bancroft.

"Was a well-to-do farmer, trader, and contractor of the true New England type, shrewd, active, enterprising, and economical. Though himself a man of fair education, he considered that anything beyond a common school course would be only a detriment to his children, preferring rather that his boys should be trained to habits of industry and self-denial, encouraging them to feats of strength and physical endurance, and giving more heed to their bodily than to their mental development. Above all things they must display nerve and courage, depending solely on their own efforts, and putting aside all childish timidity. 'There was nothing,' he constantly repeated, 'that a farmer's lad should not be able to do and that without help from others.'"

Some of the foregoing characteristics, together with the moral courage to do the right thing at the right time in all things pertaining to important matters, quick perception and repartee, self-reliance, energy, good judgment, quiet and unostentatious reverence, order, an aversion to idleness, and, what are rare traits, coolness, self-sacrifice and forgetfulness of one's own interests especially in times of calamity and great danger, in order to help others, are also strongly developed characteristics on the maternal side; at least among many of the descendants of Lieut. John Abbott of Holden, of whom Senator Warren is one. There were five pioneers of the Warren family in America between 1620 and 1635, but the pedigree of his branch of the family is not known. Mr. Jos. S. Warren m. (2d), Nov. 23, 1859, Elizabeth Strong, b. July 7, 1838, by whom he had two sons and three daus. He d. Dec. 27, 1884, ae. 60 yrs.: had 5 chil. (9th gen.):

- i. Francis Emery⁹ Warren, b. in Hinsdale, June 20, 1844, second cousin once removed to the Compiler of this work. His mother d. when he was 15 yrs. old, and until eighteen, when he enl. for the Civ. War, his youth was devoted to school and farming, residing for a time in Hinsdale, Springfield, Becket, Washington, and Savoy, Mass. Besides the private instruction received from his mother, who was a good mathematician, he stud. at the dist. sch. and at Hinsdale Acad., paying his own way at the latter. He enl. for the Civ. War in July, 1862, in Co. C, 49th Regt., Mass. Vol. Inf., 19th A. C., and served with credit as a priv. and corp. till mustered out, in Sept., 1863, by reason of expiration of term of service. Some time after this he was a Capt. in Mass. militia. In 1894, in accordance with an Act of Congress, he was awarded by the Hon. Sec. of War a Medal of Honor for "exceptional gallantry" at the siege of Port Hudson. He also participated in the battles at Plains Store and Donaldsonville, and in many skirmishes. For about four years after the war, he was engaged as sup't on a stock farm in Hinsdale, where he acquired a knowledge of grading, ditching, mill work, carpentering, blacksmithing, etc. In 1868 he went West, and for a time was engaged as foreman of one of the working parties in the construction of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Ry., west from Des Moines, Ia., but finally, during the year, permanently located in Cheyenne, Wyo., a new frontier town, then a part of Dakota, subject to frequent Indian raids, took charge of a general retail store, and afterwards founded there the F. E. Warren Mercantile Co., in which he is still largely interested, its specialty being house-furnishing goods, etc. He has been largely engaged in the live stock, lighting business, etc., and has had a most remarkable career.

Between 1873 and 1880 Mr. Warren devoted a goodly part of his time to the raising of sheep and cattle. During this period were successfully established for this purpose the firm of Guiterman & Warren, which was afterwards disposed of for $510,000, of which $400,000 belonged to Warren. The company is said to have returned a profit of from 30 to 40 per cent. per annum during the five years of its existence. Much of the stock and many of the ranges, in 1883, passed into the hands of the Warren Live Stock Company. "The corporation," says Warren, "was the largest of its kind in Wyoming, its possessions including 90,000 to 110,000 sheep, with 3,000 head of cattle, nearly as many horses, and more than 100,000 acres of land in fee-simple, in addition to the control of other tracts, amounting in all to more than 250,000 acres, and forming an unbroken range, extending on either side of the Union Pacific. It was divided into some 50 ranges, the principal ones being connected by telephone with each other and with the company's offices at Cheyenne.

"The value of the land, which is of excellent quality, has been greatly improved by the construction of nearly 100 miles of ditches, with reservoirs for storage, and a large number of wind-mills, placing almost the entire area under irrigation. At several points hay is raised in large quantity, the crop for 1888 being about 1,800 tons. Lands planted in alfalfa returned good yield, and oats are harvested as winter feed for stock. But the principal feeding station was at Duncan, Nebraska, where sheep and cattle were fattened for market, the sales of beef and mutton sometimes reaching $50,000 per month.

"Of wool, the clip for 1888 was nearly 500,000 pounds or 25 car-loads. . . . In the mountainous portions of the tract some 2,500 head of Angora goats were herded. The cattle were of the Hereford breed, and the horses included the Clydesdale, English draft, and French coaching stock, with mares of select Oregon grades. Herds of Berkshire and China swine, with poultry of all kinds, and the finest vegetables, were to be found on the farms. On one of them was a herd of tame antelope, and on another buffalo. Finally there is a vein of bituminous coal, ten feet in thickness, at present used only for home consumption, but capable of furnishing an almost unlimited supply.

"Elsewhere, not only in Wyoming, but in Montana, Dakota, Nebraska, and Colorado, Mr. Warren is largely interested in lands and live-stock, paying taxes in nearly all the counties in Wyoming and in many of the counties in adjoining States and Territories.

"With other enterprises, Mr. Warren became identified,—as the Electric Light Company, the Cheyenne Gas Company, the Cheyenne Carriage Company, and the Opera-house Company.

"By him were erected some of the most substantial buildings in Cheyenne, and that at a time when the future of the city was by no means assured. First of all was the Warren block, with its four spacious stores occupied by the Mercantile Company's establishment. In March, 1884, this structure was destroyed by fire, together with its entire stock of merchandise, causing a loss to the company of more than $250,000, with less than $00,000 insurance. It was afterwards rebuilt, and near its site, but covering a larger area, was erected the Warren Emporium, a brick edifice 180 by 132 feet.

"Perhaps Mr. Warren never appeared to better advantage than on the occasion of this disaster. The fire broke out at one o'clock in the morning, and in less than an hour the flames had burst through the upper stories, dooming the Warren block to destruction. Adjoining it was the Inter-ocean hotel, which was in imminent danger, and as his property was being swept away before his eyes, Mr. Warren cried out to the firemen: 'Boys, save the Inter-ocean and I'll be satisfied!' Then he entered the burning building and drew together and fastened the connecting fire-proof doors, a task which had been forgotten, and which none but he now dared to undertake. For himself he seemed but little disturbed, expressing more admiration for the heroic conduct of the firemen than of regret for his misfortune. Though a few days before he had received from some miscreant an anonymous letter, marked with a skull and crossbones, and with threats of vengeance, he suspected no one, and believed himself merely the victim of accident.

"Let us now consider to what extent the progress of Cheyenne has been due to Mr. Warren's enterprise and foresight. At the date of his arrival in the summer of 1868, the ephemeral growth which had followed its first settlement in the previous year, and which gave the city its title, had already been succeeded by despondency and collapse. It was, as we have seen, a mere village of lots and tents, containing but a few hundred inhabitants, most of them railroad builders, with a sprinkling of merchants and miners, and a large admixture of gamblers and prostitutes. In the entire territory which then formed a portion of Dakota, there were not 5,000 people, and the Wyoming of to-day, with her immense cattle-ranges, her railroad system, and her varied industries, was not even thought of by the few who still had confidence in her future. But among the most hopeful was Mr. Warren, whose faith remained unshaken amid all this depression, for to him Cheyenne already appeared as one of the natural gateways of the West, one of the natural points of distribution, holding the same relation to the surrounding country as did Ogden, Omaha, and Kansas City to the several regions for which they were the established centres.

"Here then he remained and gradually built up the business which became the largest of its kind in Wyoming, meanwhile opening commercial relations with all the neighboring States and Territories. As funds increased, his surplus means were invested in stock-raising, aiding to develop this industry, and making others rich, affording occupation to hundreds, while expending large sums in improvements. Then he built a number of costly business structures, owning as early as 1881, when the city contained less than 4,000 inhabitants, no less than 14 stores completed or in course of erection. Thus he gave confidence to his fellow-citizens, who, knowing that he had come among them a poor man and had made his way by his own energy and forecast, were not slow to profit by his example.

"Finally, he took a leading part in the various enterprises to which Cheyenne was so largely indebted for its material and social development, such as aiding in securing for it the location of the Union Pacific workshops, which furnished employment for an army of men. And during all those years every dollar that he earned, every dollar that he saved, was invested in a manner that would directly benefit that city, would add to the value of her industries and commerce, to her natural and acquired resources. . . .

"In conclusion, let us turn to Mr. Warren's political career, which is connected with some of the most interesting events in the territorial history of Wyoming. His first experience in this direction was in 1872, when, as in the following year, he was elected to the office of city trustee. Then we find him in the upper House of the Legislature, of which he was President before reaching his thirtieth year, being again elected a member in 1883. In 1884, he refused the nomination for Congress, though tendered by a unanimous vote of the Republican party, on the ground that his business interests would interfere with a conscientious discharge of his duties. For six years he was treasurer of the Territory, and in January, 1885, was elected Mayor of Cheyenne, after serving as one of the city council during 1883 and 1884. In all these positions, and also as chairman of the Territorial Republican central committee, his record was one of the highest, no less for his faithfulness and integrity than for his comprehensive grasp of public affairs. But it was in a still higher sphere that he was destined to win for himself the reputation which he now enjoys as one of the foremost of Wyoming's statesmen."

In February, 1885, during the last days of the Arthur administration, Mr. Warren, while still Mayor of Cheyenne, a member of the Legislature, and Territorial treasurer, was appointed Governor of Wyoming; but, for his vigorous and just criticism in the line of duty of the hardships entailed locally by the land policy as administered by the Commissioner during the first Cleveland administration, he was removed from office.

"Still," says Bancroft, "Mr. Warren continued to urge with his usual vigor the home-rule policy outlined by Wyoming and other Territories. Meanwhile he threw the weight of his influence in favor of Dakota, Washington, and Montana, in their struggle for Statehood. As a delegate to the Chicago Convention, he was one of those who secured the nomination of Harrison, and who added to the platform of his party the promise of home rule and Statehood. Almost immediately after the President's inauguration, though again without solicitation on his part, his name was sent to the Senate as Governor of Wyoming, and the appointment was made.

"On the 3d of June, 1889, Governor Warren issued a proclamation ordering that an election be held for the choice of delegates to a convention to assemble at Cheyenne the first Monday in September, for the purpose of framing a State Constitution and submitting it to the vote of the people. After a thirty days' session the task was completed, and among the several provisions the following is worthy of note: 'The rights of citizens of the State of Wyoming to vote and to hold office shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex. Both male and female citizens of this State shall equally enjoy all civil, political and religious rights and privileges.' On the 5th of November an election was held in accordance with the Governor's proclamation, and the Constitution was adopted by 6,272 out of the 8,195 ballots that were cast, the smallness of the vote being caused by the inclement weather, and by the fact that the result had been anticipated almost as a foregone conclusion.

"In March, 1890, a bill for the admission of Wyoming was passed by the Representatives; in June an amended bill was passed by the Senate; a few days later it was indorsed by the House; on the 10th of July it received the President's signature, and Wyoming was at length admitted among the sisterhood of States. Meanwhile her Governor had worked incessantly to bring about this long-desired result, working not only with the Territory, but by his presence at Washington, at whatever sacrifice to his business interests, assisting Wyoming's Representative to bring to pass the measure which he held so near at heart.

"Under the law of admission, which provided that until State officials should be elected and qualified, the territorial officers should continue to discharge their duties, Mr. Warren became the first Governor of Wyoming. Within five days after the passage of the law he appointed an election for September following, and on himself, while suffering from a dangerous illness, fell the choice of the Republican convention, a choice which the people indorsed by a majority of more than 1,700 votes.

"On the 12th of November, 1890, was convened at Cheyenne the first legislative assembly of the State of Wyoming. . . . Among the first duties of the Assembly was the election of two United States Senators to be sworn into office on the 1st of December, 1890, and their terms decided by lot, as is the custom in newly admitted States. The choice fell on Joseph H. Carey and Governor Warren, the latter of whom drew the short term, expiring on the 4th of March, 1893."

In 1894 he was again elected a Senator, for the long term, commencing March 4th, 1895. As Governor of Wyoming his administration was vigorous, highly creditable and characteristic. Among his most important measures during his first administration was to issue a proclamation establishing a quarantine in Wyoming against all the States and Territories where pleuro-pneumonia existed or was supposed to exist, and another was his prompt action, sagacity and splendid judgment in connection with the now historic anti-Chinese riot in Sept., 1885, at Rock Springs, which was timely, humane, and greatly to his credit.

He was in favor of connecting with the north and north-west the railroad systems of Colorado, Mexico, and Texas. In his judgment the mines of the Black Hills and of Colorado should be provided with direct communication, and a line should be built independent of existing corporations, from Mexico to the British possessions, along the eastern pass of the Rocky mountains. These and other matters were presented in his able message to the legislature. As the result, measures were enacted which led to the building of the Cheyenne Northern railroad, a university was authorized for Laramie, an insane asylum for Evanston, and for Cheyenne a capitol building to be erected at an expense of $275,000.

"The short remaining session," says Bancroft, "of three months at the end of the fifty-first Congress, gave the Senators for Wyoming little opportunity for action; but among the measures introduced by Mr. Warren was one providing that the Government should cede all arid lands to the States in which they are situated. Liberal appropriations were also secured, including those for an agricultural college and experiment station in connection with the Wyoming University, for the Wyoming National Guard, for the establishment of agencies on Indian reservations, for the enlargement of military posts, and for extensive surveys of public lands.

"Thus," concludes Bancroft, "we have traced the leading incidents in the career of Francis Emory Warren, from the time when, as a farmer's son, he trod barefoot through . . . western Massachusetts, until we find him to-day representing in the National Legislature, the State with whose interests his own have been so long identified. Arriving in Cheyenne at a time when the only frame building which it contained was the little store in which he worked and slept, he has lived to see that city develop into a commercial and industrial centre, the future greatness of which is now abundantly assured.

"Those who are personally acquainted with Governor Warren, who have observed his powerful physique, his force of character, his tireless energy, his rare executive ability, and the ease with which his manifold duties are performed without sign of flurry or excitement, cannot fail to recognize in him a natural leader of men.* Tall in stature, an inch or more over six feet in height, his frame is massive but well proportioned, his average weight exceeding 200 pounds, and that without any superfluous flesh. Square-shouldered, deep-chested, and long of limb, in carriage erect and graceful, notwithstanding his herculean build, there are none among the citizens of Cheyenne whose appearance will so quickly arrest the attention of the observer. His features are regular and strongly outlined, with broadly arched forehead, hair of a light brown hue, and clear gray eyes, in whose fearless gaze may be read the courage and determination of the young volunteer who faced the batteries of Port Hudson, when before their withering volleys the stanchest veteran quailed."

Wherever she was, her peaceful, ideally neat, orderly and attractive home, embellished with rare and beautiful things by her cultured and faultless taste, was always a social centre before as well as after her husband entered public life: and a caller, as well as a guest bidden to come, was sure of a cordial welcome and an entertainment of intellectual value as well as of passing pleasure. * Once when Senator Warren presided over the Wyoming Territorial Legislature, two members, after the free and easy way of western statesmen of the day, wanted to secure a bill which was upon the clerk's desk and make way with it. When the stalwart legislators attempted to seize the bill they were confronted by the clerk. A struggle ensued. As soon as Senator Warren grasped the situation, he sprang from his chair and faced the combatants. Single-handed he separated the three men, rescued the bill, put the clerk back at his desk, sent the two legislators to their seats, and then resumed his place as presiding officer. "The House will come to order!" was his sole remark. On the occasion of the fight between Senators Tillman and McLaurin, of So. Carolina, on the floor of the U. S. Senate, in Feb., 1902, blows were passed and they grappled with each other: Senator Warren was the first to recover from the surprise of the unexpected event. Sitting near the combatants he sprang from his seat, and although Tillman is a large, powerful man, threw one arm around and lifted him bodily from the floor as though he were a child, and with the other arm around McLaurin's neck held them with vice like grip, thus parting them and ending the affair. Other Senators, as soon as they recovered from their surprise, gathered around and relieved him of McLaurin, when Warren with ease and unconcern carried Tillman bodily back to and placed him in his seat, and kept him there till the remarkable and now historic incident was closed. CYRUS CHENERY⁷ ABBOTT (Lemuel,⁶ John,⁵ Samuel,⁴ Samuel,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Holden, Worcester Co., Mass., Aug. 25, 1791. He was a cartmaker, according to the Worcester, Mass., deeds, in Holden, 1814; a trader in Paxton, Mass., 1820, about which time he was an early settler in Salem, now Conneaut, on Lake Erie, Ashtabula Co., O., where he d. Sept. 6, 1825, ae. 36 yrs. The maiden name of his wife, or when, or where he was m. is unknown. He sold all his right and title in his father's estate to his bro. Col. Jervis⁷ Abbott, for $1,000, June 5, 1814.*

The following extract from an old letter of C. C.⁷ Abbott to his uncle Capt. Samuel⁶ Abbott, of Williamstown, Vt., dated Holden, May 30, 1813, is of interest. After notifying his uncle of his brother's (Capt. Lemuel⁶ Abbott) death from a stroke of paralysis, Cyrus continues by saying :

"Your kind mother (widow of Lieut. John⁵ Abbott) has been very sick. We had the things all prepared to lay her out in, but God was pleased to restore her to health, in a measure, so that she is able to go out to meeting, and be about the house, but is very much broken. We shall build a tomb next month for your dear father who left us very suddenly and unexpected to all the people around. I hope you will feel yourself able and come and see us next fall, if nothing happens. You can see where my kind, indulgent and good father (Capt. Lemuel⁶ Abbott) has gone," etc.

Having been brought up away from his paternal kindred they are comparative strangers, and know nothing of his whereabouts. It is supposed he resides in Iowa. He sold to Susannah A.7 Abbott, of Holden, Apr. 29, 1846, for $50, his interest in the estate of his gr.-mother, Zillah Davis, of Holden. He then lived in Carbondale, Luzerne Co., Pa., but is not there now. His wife's name was Anna B. Abbott.*

COL. JERVIS⁷ ABBOTT (Lemuel,⁶ John,⁵ Samuel,⁴ Samuel,³ George,² George¹) own cousin to the father of the Compiler of this work, was b. in Holden, Worcester Co., Mass., Dec. 16, 1792, and m. there June 2, 1814, Rebecca Crosby, b. in Holden, Sept. 2, 1791, who d. there in 1860 in her 69th yr. Probably nothing will show the domestic felicity and character of Col. Abbott better than the following extracts from old letters, written by him over half a century ago, now in the hands of the Compiler. In a letter dated Holden, Mass., July 27, 1841, to his uncle, Capt. Samuel⁶ Abbott, of Williamstown, Vt., Col. Abbott, after speaking of his afflictions and the miraculous restoration to health of one of his family whom he supposed would die, says:

"What a wise, just and merciful God protects us! How feeble, how sinful, how unworthy we are! How dependent, and yet how much God does for us! . . . I close by saying to you that I hope if you do not feel prepared to meet death you will read the Scriptures. Remember there is pardon for sinners. Prayers to God for the forgiveness of sins will remove them. Shrink not from your duty. Let your last days be your best days. May God bless you in life, be with you at death, and receive you in heaven at last, to spend an endless happiness."

Again, in a letter dated Holden, Mass., Jan. 21, 1846, to the same uncle, who was personally known to the Compiler as a gentle, kind and good old gentleman, with exceptionally good habits and universally respected, Col. Abbott says:

"You would be astonished to see Worcester, to see how it is built up. More than 300 houses, I think, were built there last year, and seemingly as many more will be this year. If our good (?) Polk, and friends, destroy the Tariff, I do not know what will be, but think it will cause great stagnation in business. How I would just like to catch up the violin with my children, and our friends there [Williamstown, Vt.] and join in a few pieces of church music," etc.

Col. Abbott held commissions in the Mass. Mil. as follows: Capt., Feb. 15, 1817; Maj., Apr. 21, 1819; Col., May 27, 1822. Estes in his History of Holden, Mass. (1894), says:

* Worcester, Mass., Deeds, cccxi: p. 322.

"To Col. Jervis⁷ Abbott, Holden is under great and peculiar obligations. In his old age tree-planting became almost a mania with him, and to this fact we owe the well-grown shade trees which now adorn both the Common and the old cemetery, and much more of the foliage which so beautifully embowers the village. It were indeed by no means to be regretted if the sound sense of all our citizens tended as much to village improvement and general advantage, as did the failing powers of Colonel Abbott."

He is mentioned in the Worcester Deeds between 1816 and 1830, as grantor 31 and as grantee 20 times, in transfers of real estate. He is mentioned in early life as blacksmith, and yeoman, but many years before his death as "gent." only. He was a mem. of the Congl. Ch., and d. in Holden, Nov. 15, 1870, ae. 77 yrs. He sold his interest in his mother's estate to Zillah M. Abbott, Jan. 1, 1840, for $500.*

MAJ. CHENERY⁷ ABBOTT (Lemuel,⁶ John,⁵ Samuel,⁴ Samuel,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Holden, Worcester Co., Mass., Dec. 10, 1795, own cousin to the father of the Compiler of this work, and m. Betsey Wood, b. 1798, dau. of Rev. Benjamin, of Upton, Mass. They both d. in Holden, he, in 1877, ae. 82, and she, in 1823, ae. 25 yrs. He was the third and last proprietor in the family, of "the old Abbott Tavern," in Holden, mentioned in the sketch of Lieut. John⁵ Abbott, his gr.-father, who built the hotel and was its first proprietor. Maj. Abbott was a very popular landlord, genial, generous, companionable and rotund. He was a member of the committee of arrangements and one of the marshals of the centennial celebration of Holden, 1841; was a member of the Masonic fraternity; and also of the Holden Grange, No. 78, Patrons of Husbandry, 1875. He held commissions in the Mass. Mil. as follows: Paymaster, July 7, 1818; Capt., Aug. 12, 1819; Major, May 7, 1828.

His transactions in real estate are of interest, as with him, apparently, the estate of his father went to pieces. According to the Worcester, Mass., deeds they are as follows: He sold to Ethan Davis, gent., of Holden, on Oct. 10, 1822, for \$900, abt. 37 acs. of "mowing," pasture and woodland, in the southeastern part of Holden, received by Maj. Abbott from his father's estate, which included his right in the land set off as thirds, or dower, to his mother Zillah Davis, from her former husband's (Capt. Lemuel Abbott) estate; also all his right and title in abt. 3½ acs. of land, barns, blacksmith's shop and coal shop, thereon, in the centre of the village of Holden; also on Oct. 8, 1823, to Col. Jervis Abbott, gent., of Holden, for \$100, abt. 3½ acs. of land with a house thereon in the centre of the village of Holden, on the north of the turnpike and south of the old county road; also on Apr. 4, 1826, to Jesse Partridge and others of Holden, by Maj. Chenery Abbott, gent., and others of Holden, for \$680, all their right and title in ¼ of abt. 80 acs. of pasture, plowing and woodland, pertaining to Capt. Lemuel Abbott's estate, in the southeasterly part of Holden, etc.; also Aug. 9, 1826, to Spencer Crosby, yeo., of Holden, for \$60, abt. $3\frac{1}{2}$ acs. of meadow land in the southerly part of Holden; also Apr. 8, 1829, to Samuel Stratton, gent., and David Davis, M. D., for \$272, abt. 13 acs. of pasture and woodland in the southerly part of Holden; also Apr. 1, 1829, to Levi Smith, shoemaker, of Holden, for \$700, abt. 21 acs. with a house and barn thereon, being part of a farm owned by Jesse Partridge, etc.; also, Jan. 11, 1817, to Levi Smith, cordwainer, of Holden, for \$71.57, abt. $6\frac{1}{2}$ acs. of land in Holden; also May 3, 1830, to Moses Crosby, shoemaker, of Holden, for \$445, abt. 20 acs. of pasture land in the southerly part of Holden, once owned by Jesse Partridge; also, Apr. 1, 1831, to Dennis Davis, yeo., of Holden, for \$100, abt. one ac. in the southerly part of Holden on the road to Worcester; also, Mar. 15, 1832, to Ebenezer H. Balch, gent., of Worcester, for \$900, abt. 38 acs. and 119 rds. of land in the southwesterly part of Holden; also Apr. 1, 1832, to Charles Clapp, of Holden, for \$800, abt. $\frac{1}{4}$ of an ac. with a house thereon, about ten rds. from the old cemetery; also Apr. 4, 1832, to Nancy, wife of Samuel Hubbard, of Holden, for \$185, abt. 3 acs. and 100 rds. on the westerly side of the county road west of the ch.; also Apr. 1, 1832, to John Hall, husb., of Holden, for \$166.92, abt. 6 acs. and 48 rds. of plow land in the southerly part of Holden; also May 8, 1832, to George A. Trumbull, gent., of Worcester, for \$250, certain woodland in the westerly part of Holden, abt. a mile from the ch.; also Jan. 1, 1833, to Susannah A. Abbott, of Holden, for \$90, abt. $11\frac{3}{4}$ acs. of land in the south part of Holden; also Feb. 28, 1832, to Samuel Stratton, Jr., blacksmith, of Holden, for \$50, abt. 4 acs. $9\frac{7}{10}$ rds. of swamp in the southerly part of Holden, about a mile from the ch.; also Apr. 2, 1832, to Joel Clapp, yeo., of Holden, for \$59.88, abt. 5 acs. of pasture land in the southerly part of Holden; also May 5, 1830, to Joel Clapp, of Holden, for \$3, abt. 15 rds. abt. one mile and a half southerly from the ch. in Holden; also Apr. 11, 1832, to Patience Clapp, of Holden, for \$193.78, abt. 19 acs. and 62 rds. of pasture and mowing land in the southerly part of Holden; also Jan. 28, 1833, to Caleb Kendall, husb., of Holden, for \$75, abt. 7 acs. and 79 rds. of land in the southerly part of Holden; also May 31, 1833, to Oliver Clapp, yeo., of Holden, for \$1,400, abt. 3 acs. and a house thereon, abt. 40 rds. westerly from the ch. in Holden; also Jan. 24, 1833, to John Hall, husb., of Holden, for \$210, abt. $26\frac{1}{4}$ acs. of pasture land in the southerly part of Holden; also Apr. 9, 1830, to Ethan Davis, Esq., of Holden, for \$140.01, abt.

8 acs. and 46 rds. about 80 rds. west of the Congl. ch. in Holden. On Aug. 4, 1834, he made an assignment in favor of his creditors to Ethan Davis, Esq., and Charles Chaffee, Esq., of Holden. On Dec. 2, 1835, he disposed of all his right and title to Samuel Damon, 1st, joiner, of Holden, for $475, in about 6 acs. and 80 rds. abt. 100 rds. easterly of the ch. in Holden, with buildings thereon, etc., as well as of abt. 40 rds. of land southerly of the aforesaid lot. From 1819 to 1834, he was the grantee in 26 real estate transactions. He is variously mentioned in the deeds as blacksmith and inn-keeper, but for many years before his death as "gent." only.

RICHARD FLAGG⁷ ABBOTT (Abijah,⁶ John,⁵ Samuel,⁴ Samuel,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Barre, Washington Co., Vt., June 3, 1799, and was m. there at the old homestead by Peter Johonnott, Jr., Justice of the Peace, May 13, 1832, to Mary Norris, of Washington, Orange Co., Vt., b. Feb. 28, 1817, only dau. of Jacob⁶; gr.-dau. of James,⁵ Jr.; and gr.-gr.-dau. of Maj. James⁴ Norris of the Continental Army, during the Rev. War, who was a descendant of Nicholas Norris who located in Hampton, N. H., about 1663, and in Exeter, N. H. 1666. The following is from the Norris Family Register, 1640-1892:

"The early patronymic was Norrey and Norreys. . . . The family is an ancient one in England. For many centuries it flourished in Sutton and Lancashire. In A. D. 1311, Sir Henry Norreys, by marriage with Joan, daughter of Sir Henry Molyneux, acquired the Manor of Speke, in Lancashire. William Norreys, of Sutton, was descended from Alain Norreys, who in a remote time dwelt on the same estate. From him are descended the celebrated families of the name of Norris, in Speke, Lancashire, and Ryecote, in the County of Berkshire. . . . Many of this blood have been distinguished in times past, and numerous members bear the name with high honor at the present. Sir Henry Norris of Ryecote, was granted a peerage in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Early, some of the English Norrises settled in Ireland; one branch lived in Armagh, and claim descent from Sir Henry of Ryecote, Berkshire. Among the noted members of the Armagh family, was Sir William Norris who died in 1859. He was once Chief Justice of Ceylon, India, and his father was President of the College of Surgeons in London. A son of Sir William Norris is W. E. Norris of Underbank, Torquay, England, an author of high repute. In the records of the City Hall at Leyden, Holland, is the recorded fact that Mary Norris, a girl of Newbury, England, was married to Isaac Allerton, Nov. 11, 1611. He was of London, England, and they were of that Pilgrim Colony which located in Leyden. She came as a passenger in the Mayflower to Plymouth, Mass., in 1620," with her husband and three children.

Mrs. Abbott's gr.-gr.-father, Maj. James⁴ Norris, of Epping, N. H., served from the beginning to the close of the Rev. War with distinction as Captain and Major, mostly in the Continental, or Regular, Army. On May 24, 1775, the "Fourth Provisional Congress" of N. H., authorized him through the Committee of Safety to raise a company of sixty-two men in Epping, for the 2d N. H. Regt., Col. Enoch Poor, Comdg. This and the First and Third Regiments of N. H., were the three afterwards selected from that State to serve in the Continental, or Regular, Army; and on the organization of the 2d Regt. for that purpose, Capt. Norris was recommissioned Captain in that Regiment, Nov. 7, 1776, Col. Nathan Hale, of Rindge, N. H., Comdg., and on Sept. 20, 1777, was promoted Major 3d Regt., N. H. Contl. Army, Col. Alexander Scammell Comdg. These regiments comprised Gen. Enoch Poor's regular brigade of the Contl. Army, and were in most of the principal engagements of the Rev. War from 1777 to 1779, being prominent in the battles of the 19th of Sept. (Bemis Heights) and the 7th of Oct., 1777. Their bravery is mentioned in terms of the highest praise by eminent historians,* the battle of Oct. 7th causing the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne at Stillwater, Oct. 17, 1777.† In both of these engagements, "the New Hampshire troops were conspicuous for their bravery and general good conduct, and sustained severe losses. . . . Col. Scammell fearlessly led his regiment where the fire was the hottest."‡

James⁵ Norris, Jr., served as a private in the militia of N. H., and in the Contl. Army during the entire war, having first enlisted at 16 yrs. of age in his father's Co., 1775, and then in the same regiments with his father in the regular army, continuing in service till 1782.§

Jacob Norris, a bro. of Mrs. Abbott, in early life was a Baptist minister, but was afterwards a merchant and owned a large bookstore in Rock Island, Ill. He was well informed, of fine presence, gifted as an extemporaneous speaker, and was much in demand locally on all impromptu occasions at public gatherings as a public speaker. Isaac, another brother, was for a time an officer in the army.

Mr. Abbott was the first child born to them in Barre after his parents left Mass. He received a common school education, was a granite manufacturer and contractor, and the first to introduce Barre granite from what is now known as Millstone Hill for monumental purposes. He was also for a time tavern-keeper at E. Barre, which is now a thriving village. The land records of Barre show that he bought a brick dwelling house, barns, out-houses, etc. (on the southwest corner at the crossing of the roads just south of and near the railroad depot in E. Barre, where there is now [1900] an old cellar hole, Feb. 8, 1827) which was kept by him as a hotel for several years. This property was deeded by him to his brother-in-law, Enoch Howe, of Williamstown, Vt., May 13, 1830, but whether Mr. Abbott discontinued the hotel business then or not is not known.* At that time several roads centering, and there being a grist and saw mill, together with a settlement there, it was considered a good point for a tavern stand, and the house was quite popular for several years and did a thriving business. The main thoroughfare was a chartered turnpike road running about 18 miles from "the checkered store" in Barre village to Chelsea, Vt. It was the outlet southeast to towns in Mass. and N. H., and for traffic to and from Boston, over which for a time the stage coaches, and other six or eight horse teams passed, the latter carrying freight to and from Boston, for Montpelier and Barre merchants. Soon, however, Ira Day, of South Barre, built a road through the celebrated gulf in Williamstown, about 6 miles distant from So. Barre, which took away a large portion of the travel from the Chelsea route. The gulf road subsequently became the stage route, travelled by six and eight horse coaches, taking the travel from Montpelier and towns north — from Canada even — and at one time carried the British mail, which came then by way of Boston, with an armed British soldier as escort. These stately coaches continued to run till within the childhood remembrance of the Compiler, and were the first of the kind ever seen by him; they were drawn by large, proud, thorough-bred, dock-tailed Morgan horses, finely equipped, and looked so near alike it was difficult to tell one from another. This change in the route of traffic blighted the promising future of E. Barre and was probably the main cause which led Abbott to give up the hotel business there. Even while here, though, he was engaged in the granite industry, as he was a man of much energy.

About 1833, he, Col. Nathaniel Sherman — a farmer living on the West Hill where the Sherman tomb is, on the side of the road by the old brick house near Peck Pond — and Col. Joseph D. Harrington were the contractors for supplying granite by the cubic foot for the State Capitol building — the sills, caps, cornices, etc., being taken from the Little Cobble Hill quarry — at Montpelier, the two latter being associated with Abbott only pecuniarily, he supplying the granite, as neither of the other contractors were manufacturers. At that time the stone wall running northerly on the right of the road about 300 yards west of the Abbott house where the old cellar hole now is, divided the Abbott and Harrington farms north, while south of the road they were separated by a Virginia rail fence, built on a prolongation of the before-mentioned stone wall, and running southerly a half mile or more as far as the top of the mountain. The long, narrow string of quarries, which had changed but little in 55 years or more in 1903, to the west of this rail fence (which was removed about a score of years after Abbott's death), on the north side of the mountain, belonged to the Harrington, and those to the east including the Wells & Lamson light quarry, and as far south as the Holt estate, and southeast as the Wetmore & Morse quarry of this day, belonged to the Abbott estate before its division among the heirs, the latter property covering full three times as much ground as the Harrington quarries.

The contractor for delivering the granite at Montpelier was William Bradford, a farmer living near Little Cobble Hill, who, owing to the fact that he agreed to deliver it by the cubic foot instead of by weight or otherwise, lost money by his contract. Neither Sherman or Bradford owned quarries, nor as before stated were they granite manufacturers, but both have been wrongly credited with having supplied the State House granite: and the general belief in late years has been that it was all supplied from the Little Cobble Hill or Hewett-Wheaton quarry, when, as a matter of fact it was largely by Abbott from the Abbott-Harrington quarries, the latter of which Abbott leased for many years. These quarries were the first opened on what was then known as Stallion, but now as the north side of Millstone Hill.

Col. Sherman became interested in the contract from the fact that his son Hon. A. S. Sherman, at that time (1833) married one of Abbott's sisters, but Abbott was the moving spirit in the contract, as he was in most others of that day pertaining to the granite industry. The Compiler fully recollects Col. Harrington as a well to-do, genial farmer, a life-long next-door neighbor and staunch friend of Abbott's, but never as a granite manufacturer. The long stone-shed shown in the illustration in this work was built by him for Abbott who taught the former's son Ira, the granite manufacturer's trade about this time, a fact which shows that Col. Harrington was not a manufacturer, and, at any rate, never within the remembrance of the Compiler. Harrington and Sherman shared in the profits of the State House contract, but Abbott largely supplied the granite, the pecuniary responsibility for that or any day of such a large contract for many decades being too great for anyone locally to assume alone.

His eldest son was b. in what is now the city of Barre, Aug. 29, 1834, and it is probable Mr. Abbott lived there as a granite manufacturer about this time, as on Mar. 13, 1835, he bought of Maynard French for $20, the land on which the French block now stands in the city of Barre.* He deeded this property to Brooks Gale for $200, "with a new building [brick blacksmith's shop and stone shed] standing on the same, which I am now building," Sept. 9, 1836,* both of which were still standing in the 'sixties. About this time he moved to Montpelier, where his second son was b., Feb. 17, 1838; but soon after, Mr. Abbott's mother dying while on a visit to her daughters in the West and leaving the homestead unoccupied, he probably returned to it, as on Sept. 17, 1840, he bought for $200, about 8 acs. and 65 rds. of mowing, with an apple orchard thereon, just south of and across the road from the Calvin Abbott place, in Barre.* He also bought for $120, Apr. 3, 1841, of Joseph D. Harrington, 67 square rods of quarry land formerly set off in the settlement of Abijah Abbott's estate to his dau. Diantha. There are also records of many other real estate transactions by him, but want of space will not admit of mentioning them in detail. From about 1840, until his death in 1858, he lived on the homestead, carrying on at times an extensive granite business for that day, employing a goodly number of men, and subsequently, within the remembrance of the Compiler, controlling by lease and otherwise, for a time, the entire granite deposit on the north side of the mountain on the lots in the First Division originally owned by John Newton, Jabez Carey, and John Fascett,* which included all the land on which the quarries now (1900) extant are located on the north side of the mountain; he also carried on for a time the extensive maple sugar orchards above the quarries, then extant as far south as the Holt and Ben Thompson places, since largely slashed for developing quarries. While living in the lower village, now the city of Barre, his stock of granite for manufacturing purposes was transported by teams by Emery Fuller from such of the quarries on Millstone and Stallion Hill as were then operated, and from what is now known as the Wheaton quarry on the northwest side of Little Cobble Hill.

Later on, after returning to the homestead, surface granite was also used by Mr. Abbott from many of the quarries now extant, within the territory heretofore mentioned,—the Wells & Lamson light quarry and a now (1896) unused quarry directly south and in front of the old cellar hole of the Abbott residence, from which he obtained much underpinning stone, being among his favorites. Most of the work he shipped away was taken from these and other quarries near by, six and eight horse teams from Montpelier and other local teams being the means of transportation. He also used the first surface granite from time to time, as required locally, from among some of the finest quarries on the Wheeler, Ben Thompson, Walker, John D. Abbott, Cosgrove, Kimball and Parsons farms, besides other localities in Barre, Orange, Washington, and Williamstown, as the writer knows of his having done so.

For many years monuments were not manufactured from Barre granite. One of the first within the recollection of the Compiler was that made by R. F. Abbott and placed in Elmwood cemetery, Burlington, Vt., to the memory of Rev. Dr. Marsh, President of the University of Vermont, which was quite a half a century ago. While it would be a small affair at this period, it was, nevertheless, the largest granite monument manufactured in Barre from its settlement — about 80 yrs., the spire being two feet six inches square at the base, twenty feet long, and the other pieces proportionately large. As the road over which it had to be transported, a distance of about 45 miles in mid-winter, was partially bare in places approaching Burlington, it was considered at that early day, when the means of transportation and handling large stones were not as good as now, a difficult undertaking. Owing to the bare spots in the road en route, and the use of untrained animals at such work, a collection of some thirty or more pairs of farm horses and oxen was made, the best of which, after trial, were used in delivering the monument at the cemetery. Of course, these teams were not like the thoroughly equipped, trained, and well-handled heavy draught horses of to-day, used about the quarries; it was difficult to get them to pull together, not being trained to it.

Mr. Abbott and his sons Aroy and Charles, also manufactured the Charles Keith monument in the Gospel Village cemetery, and the John Thomson monument in the Nichols, now called the Wilson cemetery, Barre, the price received for the latter being $125, — such a monument now finished with modern appliances, bringing about $800 or more. These, together with the Marsh monument, and possibly others, were the first upright monuments manufactured from what is known as Millstone Hill granite. They were taken from the Abbott quarries on the north side of the hill near and just south of the old homestead.

Mr. Abbott was a manufacturer and contractor for over forty years, supplying whatever the market called for, principally underpinning, door-steps, window and door caps, sills, stone posts, curbing, flagging, gravestone sockets, etc. To undertake to give the result of his labors in detail, even if fully known, would be impracticable. So long a time has lapsed since his best work was done it has been, partially forgotten by the few now living who claim to know something, but never did know fully as well about it as the writer. From about 1832 to 1848, there was much business competition between Mr. Abbott and the firm of Parker & Hewett, and S. G. Richardson, of So. Barre, and others temporarily engaged in the granite business: also from about 1848 to 1858, between Mr. Abbott and the firm of Parker & Hewett, and Ira P. Harrington — whose family estate joined the original Abbott estate on the west — being the leading permanent manufacturers, each doing about the same amount of quarrying and manufacturing as a whole from their different quarries during the latter period. During much of the latter period Mr. E. Hewett conducted business by himself.

There were other temporary concerns during the periods mentioned, but Messrs. Parker, Hewett, Abbott, and Harrington, the latter of whom learned the business of Mr. Abbott, made the granite business their occupation for life. Probably from lack of knowledge most modern writers on the subject of the early Barre granite industry make no distinction between these pioneer veterans in the business and the mushroom manufacturers who, comparatively speaking, were on the stage but for a day.*

Mr. Abbott was an obliging neighbor, and would frequently go with or send his employes to help his competitors when pressed with their work, even to his disadvantage other than delaying his own work. Thus the Compiler is able to write understandingly on this subject, as far as he knows.

The granite business was Mr. Abbott's life-work, a most difficult undertaking in his day, as well as a most important one to the general public, and especially to the cities of Barre and Montpelier and adjoining towns; but, as is too frequently the case, most pioneers in all important and difficult undertakings will probably never receive full credit for what they did, except with the more thoughtful. Without pioneers to commence and stubbornly continue the development of this now gigantic industry, which Mr. Abbott, being more far-seeing, often predicted to his incredulous hearers, the cities of Barre and Montpelier, together with competing railroads, etc., would probably not have materialized as soon as they did; they certainly would not have reaped the benefits these and surrounding towns enjoyed, for many years prior to the great general demand a few years since for Barre granite for monumental purposes.

The town records show that he was highway surveyor, 1829, and hayward, 1830, 1833. In early life his business demands on his time were such that he frequently declined to accept public office, having no taste for it. He was an indulgent father, an obliging neighbor—frequently when hurried with his own work, going personally with, or sending some of his employes to aid a neighbor in haying and harvesting for a few hours in threatening weather—quick at repartee, a Republican, had no church affiliations, but not infrequently in winters read his Bible once or more completely through. He was very fond of flowers, and helped and encouraged the Compiler when a lad, and until old enough to do it alone, in their cultivation as a pastime. He d. suddenly of apoplexy in Barre, June 2, 1858, ae. 59 yrs., lacking about 18 hours. His widow survived him about 29 years, and d. of influenza Feb. 7, 1887, in her 70th year, in Brattleboro, Vt., where she had been supported by her third son, in a hospital, under medical treatment for 27 years, having contracted a cold in childbed, from the effects of which, though not marked at first, she never recovered, but grew gradually worse until her decease. The family lot in the Nichols, now known as Wilson, cemetery, Barre, marked by a modest granite monument,* contains the remains of three generations, including those of R. F. Abbott, his wife and youngest son.

1536 Charles Flaggr^s Abbott, b. in Montpelier, Vt., Feb. 17, 1838.

1537 Lemuel Abijah^s Abbott, Maj. U. S. A., was b. on the homestead in Barre, Washington Co., Vt., Aug. 24, 1842, where he remained till about the breaking out of the Civil War. He studied seven terms after his father's death at Barre Academy, Vt., and one term at Norwich University, then located at Norwich, Vt., on the Connecticut River opposite Hanover, N. H., the seat of Dartmouth College, the Norwich institution being the oldest military school in the U. S., excepting the Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. He taught school three winters in Chelsea, Vt., two in the upper village, commencing when 16 years old, and worked summers as a granite manufacturer in Barre to defray his expenses and those of his youngest brother, whom he hired boarded till his death by diphtheria when 7 years old.

At a public meeting held in the Town Hall in Barre, to raise troops for the Civil War, in response to the first call by President Lincoln in 1861, Abbott, then 17 years old, was the first to volunteer in town.† He was elected Sergeant in a company of Infantry then wholly raised in Barre for the war, but its services not being required, it was disbanded. This rally was held during the spring term of school at Barre Academy, which was largely attended, the subject of this sketch being one of the students.

At the hour appointed for the rally about 150 students with appropriate banners formed in procession — the young ladies leading, jauntily wearing the national flag and colors improvised for the occasion for aprons, liberty caps, etc., and the young men, not to be outdone, using the same for neckties, sashes, shirt-bosoms, hat-bands, etc., — and marched to the inspiring and patriotic music of the local brass band, amidst much enthusiasm, to the town hall, where they were received with huzzas, and where after a few brief speeches the company before mentioned, Capt. Charles G. French commanding, was raised: it was composed largely of a thoughtless, happy lot of young students who had little conception of life's severe experiences even when passed in the midst of peaceful pursuits, and much less, amidst the horrors of war and all the suffering it entails.

When the call for volunteers was made from the stage, the subject of this sketch by chance headed the long line that passed up the aisle, and first signed a paper agreeing to enlist for the war, his name heading the list. Although the company was disbanded, many who belonged to it afterwards saw active service in the war in other organizations, and made enviable records. In June, 1862, when 18 years old, Abbott was appointed by the Governor one of the recruiting officers for Co. I, 9th Regt., Vt. Vol. Inf., of Plainfield, Vt., Gen. G. J. Stannard commanding, and although urged by him to accept the Captaincy of the Co., which was offered on its organization, unwisely declined, desiring to go to college and take a profession. Almost immediately after this the President called for more troops, Vermont's quota being two regiments, but as the State had already sent nine regiments to the front, enlistments were hard to get. Accordingly, at a largely attended public rally or meeting in Barre, in July, 1862, addressed by some of the most eminent men in the State, including Hon. Geo. F. Edmunds, and others, for the purpose of raising troops for the war, Abbott was urged to enlist, in order, as it was claimed at the time, to influence others to do so: at 10 o'clock P. M., after several stirring addresses and many urgent calls for volunteers had been made without response, after much vexatious importuning, he finally enlisted for three years in Co. B, 10th Regt., Vt. Vol. Inf., of Waterbury, Vt., Capt. Edwin, son of Gov. Paul Dillingham, commanding. About forty enlistments followed, which probably included the largest number from Barre, at any one time during the war.

Men in civil life in Barre even fairly proficient in military drill were scarce in 1862, and it was doubtless due to the fact that the subject of this sketch, then a youth in his teens, had been a cadet at Norwich University, that induced those who enlisted at the same time he did, to do so, and afterwards to make him their candidate for 1st Lieutenant: at the organization and choice of officers of the company at Waterbury, soon after, he lost the office by a couple of votes only, in an election generally believed at the time to be not altogether creditable to his opponents. As the town officials of Barre kept no public record of the rallies during the eventful days of the Civil War, the exact date on which Abbott and others first volunteered is unknown, his enlistment papers being dated some days later, probably at the time of the organization of the company at Waterbury.

The following positions, not including the foregoing except the final enlistment, have been held by him in the volunteer and regular army: Left school at Barre Acad. to enl. in Co. B, 10th Regt., Vt. Vol. Inf., of Waterbury, as priv. abt. July 25, 1862; aptd. 1st Sergt. July 28, 1862; actg. Sergt. Maj., Nov., 1862; aptd. 2d Lieut. When the Spanish war broke out in 1898 President McKinley was asked by the Vermont delegation in Congress to appoint him Brig. Gen. U. S. Vols., which would have been done except that he was on the retired list of the Regular Army, which according to a law enacted about the same time by Congress made him ineligible; pro. Major U. S. A., retired, per Act of Congress approved Apr. 23, 1904.

The following is a chronological list of stations occupied, battles participated in, staff duties, etc., performed during his military career, his volunteer services being as follows:— With Gen. Heintzelman's 22d A. C., defences of Wash., D. C., 1862; dangerously ill with typhoid fever and not expected to survive at Rockville, Md., winter 1862-3; with 3d Corps, A. of P., 1863; at Williamsport, Md., in pursuit of Lee's army after the battle of Gettysburg, July 6, 1863; at battles of Rappahannock Station, Brandy Station, and Kelley's Ford, Aug., 1863; battle of Brandy Station, Va., Sept. 6, 1863; battle of Bristow Station, Va., Oct. 14, 1863; battle of Rappahannock Station, Va., Nov. 8, 1863; operations about Mine Run, Va., Nov. 26 to 28, 1863, including the battle of Locust Grove— or Orange Grove, Payne's Farm or Tavern.*— Nov. 27, 1863; with 6th Corps, A. of P., 1864-5; knocked down by exploding shell, stunned and slightly wounded at battle of the Wilderness,

The foregoing is only a brief of the Compiler's record both so far as battles and stations are concerned, there being no room for further details here. The scouting for desperadoes who were persecuting Unionists in Texas after the Civil War, was, for a year or more full of novel, exciting, startling and at times shocking day and night adventure, hardly excelled even by that of following the tragic, bloody Indian trails of scores of savage and horrible warpath parties for many years on the frontier. The sights in either case were so shockingly terrible it seemed more like a nightmare than a reality then, as did some of the scenes of the great Civil War, not only at the time but ever since when thought of. For more complete details see Addenda.

His civil record is as follows: He was instrumental in 1891, in having the outer bar to Gray's Harbor, Washington, resurveyed by the Government, which the interests of commerce there demanded, and was also instrumental at the same time in getting the officials of the N. P. Ry. Co. to submit terms to the citizens of Aberdeen, Washington, by which the company would build a branch road into the city: in recognition of these public services he was unexpectedly made an honorary member of the Board of Commerce of the city, for life. He is a life mem. of the N. E. Hist. Gen. Soc., Boston, Mass.; of the National Geographic Soc., Wash., D. C.; of Granite Lodge, No. 35, F. and A. M., Barre, Vt.; of the Topsfield, Mass. Hist. Soc.; of the Cape Cod Pilgrim Memorial Association; of the M. O. L. L. U. S., Vt. Commandery; and is a mem. of the Soc. of the Army of the Potomac. After his retirement from active service he was offered several tempting political offices in two different States, which were declined, deeming himself unfitted for civil office, having always been a professional soldier. Since about 1892 he has been engaged in compiling and preparing this Register for publication. He has no permanent residence. His address is now Washington, D. C.*

* The most embarrassing thing for the Compiler in the preparation of this work has been to write a partial sketch of his own life. There are certain important facts, however, in his career, especially in connection with civilizing the Indians, of general, and others of local town and State interest, which should not be wholly lost. As the writer was in a confidential position to the department commanders at the time his verbal recommendations for civilizing the Indians especially, were made, their history would probably be lost if not mentioned in this work so far as it is known to the Compiler: hence, he has reluctantly given the facts in the premises, with not so much thought otherwise as for these reasons, and that of being the instrument of Divinity rather against his own will, in materially helping to bring about a reform in the treatment and condition of the Indians which for decades had been a blight on and a disgrace to the Nation. That unkind criticism for saying things about himself and telling the truth will be accorded him is to be expected: but this should never deter one from writing what he believes to be correct history in connection with any important matter in which he has been one of the principal actors—the fountain-head or expert appealed to to solve a perplexing problem. The facts are not only best known to him of anyone, so far as his own acts are concerned as a whole, but were never made public because of their confidential nature, and because it could not be known at the time by those in authority or anyone (nor at least for a score of years after, when the source of the suggestions would probably be generally unknown if not wholly forgotten or ignored) that the advice if followed as it was, would prove such a decided success.

A reform of such a nature, having been gradual in working itself out, would be lost sight of, if understood as such, even if other important events in the history of the Nation such as the Spanish-American War, the repeated acquisition of insular territory to the U. S., etc., had not followed each other with such rapidity as to cause each in succession to be regarded simply as a "nine days' wonder" and then in turn sink into comparative oblivion, like the reformation of the Indians, the source for which, however, has probably never been publicly understood. The masses, generally, accept such events without a thought of the methods or their origin, unless they happen to be of the sky-rocket order such as occur in great naval or military engagements, when the good accomplished to civilization and mankind is often no greater, and when about the only risk of the chief actor is that of bodily injury, death or failure, which a few hours generally decides. In the greatest reform in Indian history and probably one of the greatest changes in the history of the world, when scores of savage tribes composed of hundreds of thousands of barbarous human beings were transformed to a state of partial civilization, the writer was at one of His remains are interred near the centre of the old cemetery by the pond in Grafton, and his grave is marked by a well-preserved slate gravestone, the only one of the family to be found in the yard. The Worcester, Mass., probate records show that Ephraim Goulding was admr. of Mr. Abbott's estate, and that on Feb. 7, 1832, it amounted to $425.33. In the division of the estate the children each received $113.08, excepting Samuel P., who up to the time of his death, the date of which is not stated, had received $86.57. The following chil. are mentioned in the prob. recs. There are no data of them in the town recs. of Grafton.

HON. HORACE⁷ ABBOTT (Alpheus,⁶ Ephraim,⁵ Samuel,⁴ Samuel,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Sudbury, Middlesex Co., Mass., July 29, 1806, second cousin, once removed, to the Compiler, and m. in Shrewsbury, Worcester Co., Mass., Oct. 4, 1830, Charlotte, b. there Aug. 30, 1807, dau. of Elijah and Eunice (Baker) Hapgood, of Shrewsbury. their agencies month after month, alone and unprotected by military force or otherwise, surrounded by some of the most dangerous characters (other than Indians) of the frontier at its worst period, subjected to all sorts of conceivable dangers, and to anxiety and mental strain which no man is ever called upon to undergo in any mere conflict of battle, such being the lottery of a professional military life. Good work was being done in a small way at a few mission schools; but when it is taken into consideration that there were thousands of uncivilized and partially civilized savages scattered over the whole domain west of the Mississippi River, the progress of civilizing them by the plan suggested was necessarily small. Without concerted action, the establishment of schools at all the agencies for the small children too young to be separated from their parents, and sending those in their teens away to schools elsewhere, surrounded by refining and civilizing, not degrading savage tribal influences, the object to be attained, — the civilizing of the Indian by study, manual training, etc., at a time when the youthful mind is most susceptible of lasting impressions, — would at least have been indefinitely prolonged, if indeed ever so well accomplished.

Mr. Abbott is another worthy example of an eminent and self-made man. By industry, perseverance, marked ability, and integrity, he rose to position, influence, wealth, and prominence. When a boy he moved from Sudbury to Westborough, Worcester Co., Mass., where he remained, a blacksmith, until 30 yrs. of age; about 1836 he went with his mother and only brother, to Baltimore, where he engaged in making heavy forgings, and afterwards in manufacturing boiler iron and ship plates, and before his death became a very wealthy, widely known man, and one of the most influential citizens of Baltimore.

“He was early engaged in the manufacture of shafts, cranks, axles, etc., in Baltimore, and is said to have made the first large steamboat shaft ever forged in this country. In 1850 he built his first rolling-mill, which was larger than any before attempted in the United States. A second mill, built in 1857, contained a pair of ten-foot rolls, which were described as being the longest plate-rolls ever made in America. In 1858 a third mill was erected, and in 1861, a fourth. In these mills the armor-plates for the ‘Monitor’ were made, and subsequently those for nearly all the vessels of the monitor class built on the Atlantic coast as well as for the ‘Roanoke,’ ‘Agamenticus,’ ‘Monadnock,’ and other Government vessels.

In 1865, an association of capitalists purchased the entire works and organized a stock company known as the Abbott Iron Company of Baltimore, and elected Mr. Abbott president.*

The Monitor referred to in the preceding quotation was the first one built by Capt. Ericsson. Mr. Abbott also furnished the armor-plates which strengthened the fleet before Charleston, S. C., and for his promptness of delivery received a letter of commendation from the Hon. Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Wells. So important were Mr. Abbott's works to the Government during the Civil War, that the men in his employ were exempt from the draft and all military service. Besides his immense plant, he was one of the first to move in establishing National Banks in the city of Baltimore, being one of the originators there of the First National Bank, of which he was a director and vice-president until his decease. He was also a director of the Second National Bank of Baltimore. His first two children were born in Westborough, and the last five in Baltimore. Only one, Charlotte, now Mrs. I. M. Cate, of Baltimore, survives, the other six having all died in Baltimore.

more, Md., Sept. 29, 1835, Catherine, b. in Vermont, Sept., 1812, dau. of Joel and Sarah (Watrous) Johnson, of Baltimore. Mr. Abbott moved from Westborough to Baltimore, with his mother and bro. Horace, 1831; was a carpenter by trade, and together with other business enterprises, started the first sash, door and blind factory in Baltimore. A son writes that his father, in 1853, invented, manufactured, and used the first band saw, and also invented a machine for cutting barrel staves, but never had either patented. He was prominently connected with the 2d Presby. Ch. in Baltimore from 1840 until his death. The two Abbott brothers, Horace and Edwin, both wealthy and influential citizens of Baltimore in their day, were widely known, and are now highly spoken of by men of prominence in Washington, D. C., and other cities, who knew them while living.

"Mr. Edwin A. Abbott, the late U. S. Shipping Commissioner, who died this inst. at his residence, No. 113 So. High St., in the 66th year of his age, had been confined to the house after paralysis, since July last, and another attack occurred on Tuesday last, causing death at midnight, Wednesday. Mr. Abbott, who was a brother of Mr. Horace Abbott of the Abbott Rolling Mills, at Canton, was a native of Massachusetts. He came to Baltimore nearly half a century ago, and engaged in the manufacture of doors and sash at Canton, his being the first and only factory of that kind in Baltimore. He afterwards carried on a saw mill near the drawbridge on Westfall avenue, and also built a steam flour mill in connection with his saw mill, and we believe this to have been the first steam mill built in this city. These mills were operated by Mr. Abbott and his sons up to about the close of the war, when the property was sold to the Calvert Sugar Refining Co., and is now occupied by that company. Mr. Abbott was a staunch Union man, and was appointed United States Shipping Commissioner in August, 1872, when the Shipping Act was passed by Congress, which created the position. He was a resident for nearly forty years of the house in which he died, was school commissioner from the fourth ward for a number of terms, was a member of the Legislature in 1856, and was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1861 that abolished slavery in Maryland."*

The first article of the Constitution of the State of Maryland was prepared by Mr. Abbott, and it reads, "All men are born equally free and are entitled to the proceeds of their own labor." His widow d. in Cheyenne, Wyo., at the home of her daughter Mrs. Freeborn, of that city.

Massachusetts Legislature. In 1855 (Aug. 29) he was ordained pastor of the Central Baptist Church, Milford, but in consequence of lung difficulty was compelled to resign in 1858. Partially recovering, he accepted the pastorate of the Weymouth Church, and was again chosen by that town to represent it in the Legislature. In 1863, he became pastor of the Central Baptist Church of Middleboro' [Mass.], the seat of Pierce Academy, then flourishing under the principalship of Prof. L. W. P. Jenks. Here he was once chosen to the Legislature, in which body, in this as in former terms, he served upon important committees. In 1868, removing to Minnesota for the benefit of his health, he was four years a pastor at Rochester, then at La Crosse, Wis., where he remained seven years."

In 1879, he became pastor of the Ch. in Alton, which, in his seventy-first year, he still efficiently serves. While in Weymouth, Mass., he served several years as Chairman of the Sch. Board. In 1862 he cast the first vote in the Mass. Legislature for the re-election of Charles Sumner to the U. S. Senate, and in 1868 reported the first bill to give women membership on Sch. Disliking political and official entanglements, he has avoided all public offices, except that of First Pres. of the School Board at Oriskany, after "leading the fight" for better schools and school facilities, and was re-elected to the same position five successive years. During this time the district was reorganized into a union school, but the supervisor deciding against necessary improvements, the case was appealed to the Dept. of Public Instruction at Albany, where, on a technicality, the supervisor was sustained. The contest, however, was not abandoned. It was renewed under the able leadership of Dr. Abbott, and carried to success; a new building was erected on an enlarged site, new departments organized, and the school placed on a basis which will be of untold benefit to coming generations, and a monument to Dr. Abbott's foresightedness, sagacity, enterprise and energy.

In early life Mr. Abbott worked at wood-turning about 3 yrs., but was afterwards employed in an insane hospital from 1853 to 1860, since which he has been engaged in farming. In 1850 he moved to Prescott, where he now lives. The old "Milo Abbott house," still standing near "Bobbinsville," is not only the oldest house in town but is historic. It was occupied at an early day as a hotel by William Conkey, and was the first tavern kept in town. It was a two-story building, with capacious, old-fashioned rooms, and is said to have been a very popular place of resort. The first recruits for the Shay insurrection are said to have been mustered here by its instigator.* Mr. Abbott was selectman, 1873-4, has been overseer of the poor, assessor, and has held several other minor town offices.

HON. CHAUNCEY MILTON⁸ ABBOTT (Chauncey,⁷ John,⁶ John,⁵ John,⁴ John,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Niles, Cayuga Co., N. Y., Aug. 14, 1822, and m. there Oct. 7, 1845, Adaline, b. in Niles, Apr. 28, 1823, dau. of Henry and Mary (Teller) Oakley, of Niles, and maternal gr.-dau. of Pierre and Margaret (Haines) Teller, of Westchester Co., N. Y. Mr. Abbott attended dist. sch. till 1837; he then studied at Poughkeepsie a year, and about the same length of time at Moravia Inst., N. Y., expecting to take a profession, but owing to his father's poor health, abandoned that plan, took charge of his father's business, and turned his attention to farming. He was also a practical surveyor. He held many public offices, among which was that of town sch. comsr., justice of the peace, supervisor, mem. H. R., N. Y. Assembly, 1858-9, and State Senator, 1862, representing the 25th Dist., comprising the Cos. of Wayne and Cayuga. He was originally a Dem. of Freesoil proclivities, but was one of the first to identify himself with the Republican movement, and was a strong union man.

When an Assemblyman, in 1858, he was a mem. of the standing committee on State Prisons; was one of the 3 Repubs. who, by their vote, defeated the enactment of a registry law during that session, and in 1859 was chairman of the foregoing committee. As a Senator he was a mem. of the following standing committees: On Internal Affairs of Towns and Counties; on Poor Laws; on Agriculture, and on Public Expenditures. He was a staunch friend of free schools and education, a man of great firmness and decision of character, and was the last man to be turned aside from an honest discharge of duty by the flattery of political friends or the terrors of party rule.

He was tall and slender, of a nervous, bilious temperament; was a man of great physical strength; wore a long, well-kept black beard; had hazel eyes, a retreating forehead, dark-brown hair, and an honest, candid expression of countenance which at once "gives assurance to a man."* He attended the M. E. Ch. and d. in Niles, N. Y., Nov. 11, 1863, ae. 41 yrs. Mrs. Abbott still survives her husband, at the age of 73 yrs., and divides her time between her two surviving chil. at Auburn, N. COL. GEORGE⁸ ABBOTT, M. D. (Orrin,⁷ John,⁶ John,⁵ John,⁴ John,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Palmyra, Wayne Co., N. Y., Nov. 2, 1826, and m. in Hamburg, Erie Co., N. Y., Apr. 19, 1857. Julia Clark Church, of Fort Ann, Warren Co., N. Y., b. in Bolton, Warren Co., Oct. 6, 1831, eldest dau. of Asa Porter and Amanda S. (Avery) Church, of Bolton, Fort Ann, and Hamburg; and gr.-dau. of Ephraim and Polly (Blair) Church, of Charlemont, Mass. Ephraim Church was a private in the Rev. War, and one of the prisoners confined by the British in the Jersey Prison Ship. Mrs. Abbott's maternal gr.-parents were Jonathan (a Revolutionary soldier, and descendant of Christopher Avery from Eng. 1630) and Pamela (Fox) Avery, of Charlemont. Mr. Avery was of the Groton Averys, and on his gravestone in Charlemont is inscribed "A Soldier of the Revolution."

Col. Abbott received most of his early education from his mother. When about 13 years old he attended district school, and then moved with his father to Akron, N. Y., where he attended the High School two years, working as janitor to pay his way. He was then given his time in order to earn the means to obtain a professional education. He studied medicine in Akron, but his father's health failing, and being the oldest child and his mother's main support, he was compelled to give up his studies till his majority, when, in 1848, he again took them up in Buffalo, working at times, having a decided gift for portrait and landscape painting, at common and fancy painting, besides teaching school to pay his way. In 1852-3 he was Principal of the School at White's Corners, now Hamburg.

In early life he constantly struggled with adversity, and continually made sacrifices to help support his mother, younger bros. and sisters, which the latter now mention to the Compiler in grateful remembrance. He attended two courses of lectures at the Geneva Medical College, and one at the Buffalo Medical University, receiving the degree of M. D. from the latter, Feb., 1852. He then became resident physician in the Sisters of Charity Hospt., Buffalo. The following July, Asiatic cholera raged in Buffalo, and the hospital for many months was overcrowded with cholera patients; he was finally prostrated with the disease, near the close of the epidemic. Apr. 1, 1853, he located in practice in Hamburg. In 1856 he joined the Erie Co. Medical Society, was made one of its censors, vice president, 1864-5, and president, 1866. He was a delegate to the N. Y. State Medical Society several years, and was elected a permanent mem. of that body 1876. His practice was always large, and when the diphtheria broke out in Western New York, 1857 and 1860, he took a leading position, treating the disease with marked success.

He has occasionally contributed articles to the medical journals of the day, his last being copied by the London Lancet, Eng. In 1867 he gave a lecture before the Erie Co. Medical Society on diphtheria, reporting statistics from over 300 cases carefully recorded and tabulated, which was printed by order of the Society. In 1856 he was elected town supt. of schools, and afterwards was actively instrumental in the organization of the Hamburg Union School and Academy, and the development of its rules, regulations and course of study, and always, when a member of the Board of Education, was either president or chairman of its executive committee. In 1872 he was elected school comsnr. of the 2d School Comsrs. District, Erie Co., and in 1878 was re-elected to that office. He has also held many of the minor offices, and also the "presiding office" of the Sons of Temperance and of the Good Templars, of the I. O. O. F., the G. A. R., the Freemasons, Town and Co. Granges, and was treasurer of the N. Y. State Grange. He also drafted the plan of the Co. Farmers' Mutual Fire Ins. Cos. He was originally an anti-slavery Whig and then an active Republican.

In 1854 he was appointed Surgeon of the 67th Regt., N. G., S. N. Y., and was mustered into the U. S. service with the regiment at Harrisburg, Pa., June 23, 1863, in response to a call for militia to assist in repelling General Lee's attempted northern raid, and served 43 days. He was then appointed by the Governor of N. Y. to raise a regiment of militia in the 3d Assembly District of Erie Co., with headquarters at White's Corners. Within sixty days he raised seven companies of about 32 men each, which were organized as the 98th Regt., N. G., S. N. Y., and was made its Colonel. He was complimented by the State authorities for having raised his regiment the quickest of any one in the State. In 1864 he was ordered with his regiment to Elmira, N. Y., and mustered into the U. S. service as a hundred days' man, Aug. 10, serving 130 days. The regiment helped to relieve the veterans who were ordered to the front for active service. Their duty had been to guard the 15,000 prisoners of war at Elmira, and to escort recruits, substitutes and drafted men to the front. By Legislative Act in June, 1868, reducing the N. G. from 75,000 to 25,000 men, the regiment, about 800 strong, was mustered out that fall, and its officers placed on the supernumerary list. In the spring of 1865 the State presented the regiment with a stand of colors duly inscribed — "98th Regt. N. G. S. N. Y., campaign 1864, from Aug. 10th to Dec. 22d." These colors were given Col. Abbott by the State when his regiment was disbanded. In Oct., 1864, while returning with his men from brigade review, he was injured by being thrown from his horse, striking on his head and shoulders, and was carried to his quarters insensible. For injuries then received, etc., he was given, in 1889, a pension of $30 per month. His assistance in tracing descendants, furnishing addresses, etc., in the compilation of this Register, has been invaluable.

Mrs. Abbott graduated from the N. Y. State Normal Sch., Albany, July 10, 1856. In all her various schools she was very successful. She is a woman of marked ability, sound judgment, strong social proclivities, a noble, self-sacrificing wife and mother, an active temperance worker, a zealous member of the M. E. Ch., earnest and faithful in her many good and benevolent works, winning for herself universal love and respect.

State Normal Sch., Albany, 1855, and recd. LL. B. from the Albany Law Sch., N. Y., 1856. From the former sch. his diploma was withheld. It was offered him on terms which he rejected, feeling it was improperly withheld as a punishment for absence from school on July 3d, when going to deliver a 4th of July oration. He taught High School successfully several years, and then became a lawyer. While located at Bethany, Mo., just prior to the war, he was called upon to defend a Methodist minister whom the people tried to send to the penitentiary for debating with another clergyman against slavery: also to defend the people against a corrupt Court House ring for stealing many thousands of dollars of the School Fund, both of which cases he gained, but not without embittering all the border ruffians in the vicinity against him. Being a Republican he was called on to resist mobs several times. Once he addressed a mob for an hour and a half under the limb of a tree where it was proposed to hang him, but his good sense and eloquence captured the hearts of a majority of his hearers and he was set free. He served as a private in 1864 in Capt. Frisby's Co. of the Harrison Co., Mo., Regt. of militia. In 1895 he was practicing attorney in Reading, Fresno Co., Cal., but is now in Reedley, Cal.

HON. ALFRED AMOS⁸ ABBOTT (Amos,⁷ Jeduthan,⁶ William,⁵ Nehemiah,⁴ Nehemiah,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Andover, Essex Co., Mass., May 30, 1820, and m. in Salem, Mass., Jan. 11, 1849, Helen Leslie Sutton, b. in So. Danvers, Mass., July 18, 1827, dau. of Gen. William and Nancy (Osborn) Sutton, of Salem, Mass. Mr. Abbott received his preparatory course for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, entered Yale Coll., 1837, grad. at Union Coll., 1841; recd. LL. B. from the Dane Law Sch. (Harv. Univ.), 1843, and was admitted to the bar 1844. He remained in Andover till 1843, when he moved to and commenced the practice of law in that part of Danvers now Peabody, where he remained until his death, Oct. 27, 1884, ae. 64 yrs. He was a representative to the Legislature from Danvers, 1850-1-2, represented the Co. of Essex, 1853, in the State Senate, and was also a member of the Constitutional Convention the same year. He was appointed District Attorney for the Eastern District, 1856, and received a vote of thanks from the place of his nativity, 1859. This office he continued to hold for many years, and in 1870, was appointed Clerk of the Courts, in which position he continued until his death, having been twice re-elected. The following is mostly from the Bench and Bar in Hurd's History of Essex Co. Mass. :

“ He was a model Clerk of Courts of the Commonwealth. He may have had his peer but never his superior in that office. He was a man of broad culture, read the best books, and was a thorough student of English literature. His public addresses were models of excellence, and as an orator he had no equal since the days of Rufus Choate.’ He was actively connected with the ‘Peabody Institute,’ and for many years President of the Board of Trustees; was intimately associated with its founder, George Peabody, and was his confidant and counselor in many of his noble plans. He always took an active interest in military affairs, was Paymaster with the rank of Major on the staff of Brig. Gen. Sutton, of the Mass. Militia, and for several years was an active member of the Second Corps of Cadets, M. V. M.

“ His relations to the bar were most amiable and most agreeable; he had no enemies and no favorites. The consequence was that he was an immensely popular Clerk. His relations to the Judges were peculiar. He was the equal in age of most of them, and in experience and eminence in practice, as well as in the current learning of the profession and in all forensic accomplishments he was the equal of most, if not all, of them. He would have been considered quite eligible to a place on either the Superior or the Supreme Bench. Before he became prosecuting officer and while he held that office, he had a good civil practice, and was concerned as junior or senior in much of the best and most important litigation in Essex County. As long ago as 1859 he was the junior to Rufus Choate in the last case that eminent man tried, a will controversy at Salem. He was a finished orator, and a ripe adept in the whole art of advocacy.’

“ In 1843 he addressed the literary societies of Phillips Academy, at Andover, on the poetry of Shelley, and on the occasion of various celebrations he delivered speeches to his fellow townsmen. He was a constant attendant at the Congregational church, and took a deep interest in all that pertained to religion.”

ABBOTT FAMILY SCHOOL FOR BOYS, FARMINGTON, ME.

Mr. Abbott studied at the Academy, Farmington, and grad. Bowd. Coll., Brunswick, Me., 1840, when 18 yrs. old, receiving A. M. in course. He was Principal of Farmington Academy, 1841 to 1849, when he took charge of the "Abbott Family School for Boys," known as the "Little Blue." This school is situated just outside the village of Farmington; and "Little Blue," the former summer residence of Jacob Abbott, the Author, of N. Y. City (so called by him from the resemblance in outline of one of the "mountains" on the grounds to Mt. Blue in the distance), was made its seat, 1844, by his bro. Rev. Samuel Phillips Abbott, under whose management it continued until he d., when it passed into the hands of the present proprietor and principal.*

* A most kindly notice of A. H. Abbott can be found on p. 71 of a Memorial Sketch of Jacob Abbott in the memorial edition of "Abbott's Young Christian" (1882). See also p. 89, same sketch.

It was here that Jacob Abbott wrote the famous "Rollo Books," and other publications for young people, and that Rev. Lyman Abbott, D. D., late pastor Plymouth Ch., Brooklyn, N. Y., passed his childhood. The grounds, covering an area of 20 acs., are full of variety and beauty. Here, says a correspondent of the Camden Herald, "the peculiar charm of New England scenery, 'the rocks and the rills, and the woods and the hills' are retained, and their beauty enhanced by artistic improvements." There are several fertile hills covered with trees and verdure, among which runs a brook spanned by seven stone bridges resembling the ancient Roman arched bridges, besides two rustic bridges, the brook forming in its meanderings two lakes for boating. The grounds are laid out in excellent taste and judgment, while choice and rare plants, shrubbery and quaint-looking trees, among which are several species of magnolia, beautify the place.

Mr. Abbott has made this school the best and most prominent institution for the education of boys in the State, and it has been largely patronized by young men from all sections of the country. He is an excellent teacher, thoroughly devoted to his work, and possesses rare scholarly attainments. He served as Supervisor of Common Schools for Franklin Co., Me., 1870 to 1873, and for about 3 yrs. as a mem. of the Board of Trustees of the State Normal School. He is a mem. of the Congl. Ch.

THOMAS TOWNSEND⁸ ABBOTT (Abiel,⁷ Asa,⁶ Joseph,⁵ Nehemiah,⁴ Nehemiah,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Sidney, Kennebec Co., Me., Sept. 1, 1833, and m. in Alexander, Wash. Co., Me., Aug. 18, 1857, Mary Elizabeth, b. in Calais, Me., June 2, 1837 (?), dau. of Manly B. and Amanda S. (Sawyer) Townsend, of Alexander. Mr. Abbott moved, when 10 yrs. old, with his parents to Alexander, where he lived until about 1876, when he moved to Oakland, Me., for a year, and then to North Anson, Me., where he d. Apr. 13, 1893, ae. 59 yrs.

"While very young, he made two voyages to sea, and then quit it for school teaching, which he followed at intervals for years, meanwhile attending school at Westbrook Seminary and Kent's Hill. For seven years he was chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Alexander, and during the war was U. S. Internal Revenue Assessor for a term of years. He was more or less engaged in lumbering before he came here, but for the last sixteen years he has been prominently engaged in it, the most of the time in company with Thomas B. Townsend, whose sister he married. Official life was so distasteful to him that he could seldom be prevailed upon to take a public trust. But the Republican party in this County, well knowing its distressing need of a strong candidate for sheriff at the last September election, persuaded him to yield to their solicitations. He was elected, defeating the popular Democratic candidate.

"From Skowhegan to Moose River, and from North Anson to Eustis, Tom Abbott was admired for his manliness. His honesty and firmness were marked traits of his character. The humblest laborer received from his hand his just dues, and he knew he would, and none went away dissatisfied. His pride was to owe no man a dollar. Even when his weary feet had entered 'the valley of the shadow of death,' his anxiety to leave the world square prompted him to finish some business transactions. Such a death seems to connect this life and the next one with a remarkable closeness. He was a brave man, but never was he more manly courageous than in the hour of death. He had nothing to fear from man, because no man was ever hurt by dealing with him. He had nothing to fear from God, because he knew he could not drift beyond His love and care. His heart was as free from revenge as his mouth from slander. He was a manly man. We shall miss him, but he is all right. God bless his memory among men till we all meet again." (Local paper.)

He was not a mem. of, but attended the M. E. Ch. Mrs. Abbott lives in Anson.

in the City of Mexico, soon marched to Toluca, Mex., but on being promoted to the 5th Inf. returned again to the City of Mexico, where he joined his new command. At the close of the war with Mexico his regiment being in Gen. Twigg's Division of Gen. Zachary Taylor's command, it was ordered into camp at East Pascagoula, La. In the fall of 1847 the regiment having been ordered into the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indian country, he was stationed at Fort Washita about three years, during the most of which time he was Post Q. M., Commissary and Adjutant. About the end of this period he was appointed R. Q. M. on the Staff of Gen. Belknap, who, with the 5th U. S. Inf., had been ordered to establish military posts on the Salt and Clear Forks of the Brazos River, in the Indian country, on the then extreme frontier of Texas. The first post established was Fort Belknap, where he remained about two years, engaged principally in the construction of the garrison buildings; his regiment was next ordered to Fort McIntosh on the Rio Grande River, where, at the end of a year he obtained a six months' sick leave of absence and then resigned from the army. For two years immediately following his resignation, he was engaged in the wholesale grocery business in Sandusky and Tiffin, O. He then located in Alton, Ill., until the commencement of the Civil War, when he went to Cincinnati, O., where he was appointed Agent in the Q. M. D., U. S. Vols., and was soon after commissioned Major in the Q. M. D., State of Ohio.

For about three years after the War he was in the real estate business in Covington and Newport, Ky., when, securing charters from the States of Kentucky and Ohio, authorizing him to construct, operate and manage street railroads in each, companies were organized and he was elected president and manager of street railway companies in Newport and Covington, and between those cities and Cincinnati, O., which offices he held for 18 consecutive years; about two years since, he sold out his interest and retired from business, being now (1895) in his 72d year. He resides in affluence about six months each year in Covington, which is his summer home, and the rest of the time in Daytona, Fla., where he has a winter residence.

RICHARD AROY⁸ ABBOTT (Richard,⁷ Abijah,⁶ John,⁵ Samuel,⁴ Samuel,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Barre (now the City of Barre), Washington Co., Vt., Aug. 29, 1834, bro. to the Compiler, and m. in Waukegan, Ill., Dec. 23, 1858. Caroline Elizabeth Wood, dau. of George, of Waukegan. Mr. Abbott studied at the dist. sch., and learned the granite manufacturing business of his father. In 1853, when about nineteen years old, he was given the balance of his minority, and with his bro. C. F. Abbott, then fifteen years old, went to Chicago, Ill., where he engaged as foreman in the building and stone business. Soon after, during the mining excitement, he went to Colorado and became interested with his bro. Charles, in gold and silver mining for a year or more; about 1857 he returned to Barre, and associated himself with his father in the granite business until the death of the latter, 1858, and until about the fall of 1859, when he returned to Chicago and again engaged as foreman in the building and stone business. Returning to Colorado about 1860 he again became interested with his bro. Charles, in mining, and in 1865-6, they established themselves in Boston, Mass., as dealers in Colorado mines, where they made many important sales. About 1867, he was a building contractor in N. Y. City, where he did a large amount of work, and afterwards, till 1869, was similarly engaged in Chicago.

After the Chicago fire, until 1874, he was largely occupied in constructing grain elevators, buildings for manufacturing purposes, large business buildings, etc. He was also a contractor for the brickwork on one of the transcontinental railroads. For a number of years he was employed by the Mich. Cent. Ry. Co. to investigate and adjust accident and other claims brought against the Co., a most responsible position and one which he filled with much ability, but not being congenial occupation he gave it up. For two years afterward he was engaged as supt. by a gold and silver mining Co. in Col., accepting later a position in Texas offered by the Sabine Pass & Northern R. R. Co. Subsequently he returned to Chicago and engaged in his old business as contractor, foreman, etc., residing in Waukegan, Chicago, and other places, according to circumstances. He was a Republican, liberal in his religious belief, and conceded a man of unusual executive and business ability. He d. after a decline of about two years, from the effects of "grippe," at Waukegan, Ill., June 27, 1894, in his 60th yr. His widow, a devoted wife, resides in Jackson, Mich., with her daughter.

Henry A. and Elizabeth (Aldrich) Hayden, of Jackson; and gr.-son of Hezekiah and Hannah Hayden, of Windsor, Ct., and Otsego Co., N. Y. Mr. Hayden studied at the pub. sch. in Jackson and at De Vaux Coll., Niagara Falls; was associated for a time with his father as a flour mfr. in Jackson, in charge of the Aetna Flour Mills, one of the oldest in Mich., which with another mill of Hayden & Co. there, had a capacity of 2,000 barrels per day. He was later proprietor of the Hibbard and Hurd hotels, owned by his father,—two of the principal pub. houses in Jackson, and owns a large farm near the city, stocked with blooded horses. He inherited jointly with a sister the Hayden home, centrally located in Jackson, which has recently been deeded to Mrs. Carrie W. Hayden, where they live. His mother was an art connoisseur of rare taste, fond of books, an extensive traveler, and collected abroad many choice pictures, as well as statuary, books, etc., with which the home abounds, the library being especially valuable. He was fire commissioner, 1885-6, 1888, 1892-3-4-5; mayor of Jackson, 1887, declining a renomination; Pres. Jackson Co. Agri. Soc., 1889; treas. same several years; U. S. Dep. Marshal several years; was mem. sec. and treas. "Granger-Hayden Carriage Co.," Jackson; Democrat; attends Epis. Ch. CHARLES FLAGG⁸ ABBOTT (Richard,⁷ Abijah,⁶ John,⁵ Samuel,⁴ Samuel,³ George,² George¹) was b. in Montpelier, Washington Co., Vt., Feb. 17, 1838, bro. to the Compiler; he m. in Kalamazoo, Mich.,

Sept. 24, 1865, Emily, his second cousin, b. in Texas, Kalamazoo Co., Mich., Oct. 26, 1842, dau. of Eli and Eliza Carter (Walker) Douglass, of Texas and Kalamazoo; and gr.-dau. of Rev. Daniel and Maria (Abbott) Walker, of Grass Lake, Mich. (see 6th gen., No. 853, ii. c.)

Mr. Abbott studied at the dist. sch., Barre, Vt., where he lived till 15 yrs. old, in the meantime learning the granite mfrg. business of his father. About 1853, he and his bro. R. A. Abbott, went to Chicago, Ill., where they engaged in the stone-cutting, contract and building business till 1857, when they returned to Barre. Here they engaged in the granite manfrg. business with their father. About 1859, they returned to Chicago and together built there some of the largest and most important stone buildings of that day, one of which was the Mich. Cent. Depot at the foot of Lake St.

About 1862, they started west, remaining in Omaha, Neb., till the following spring, when, together with A. D. Cooper, they went to Denver, Col. C. F. Abbott subsequently became noted as an expert Col. gold and silver miner. "The name of Chas. F. Abbott is familiar to all miners and early settlers of Colorado. Perhaps no man in Colorado has been through more thrilling scenes, seen more hardships, and located and handled more mines that proved valuable, than the subject of this sketch."* He and his brother started the "Feyagle Fluming Co." and C. F. Abbott was one of the founders of the "Free Gulch Mining Co." of Col., etc. In 1865-6 he established himself with his bro. in Boston, Mass., as dealer in Col. mines, where he made important sales. He became very deaf when about 18 yrs. old and was in poor health as long as he lived. He was of a very happy disposition, a Republican, and an energetic, capable business man, in spite of his physical condition. He was run over by a Chicago express train and instantly killed at Kalamazoo, Mich., Apr. 16, 1887. His widow d. there Apr. 1, 1895.

Thomson, of Montville. He is a well-to-do, enterprising farmer, a Republican, was town clerk 1865-6-7-8-9, and real estate assessor 1890-1. He joined the 1st Congl. Ch. 1868, has been dea. since 1890, and is now trustee of the society. He moved a half mile from the place where he was b., after he m., and still lives there. He enlisted in the Civil War, band musician in the 12th Regt., Ill. Vol. Inf., Nov. 11, 1861, and was discharged under the order discharging all regimental bands July 4, 1862. He was with Gen. Grant's Army, Feb., 1862, at the evacuation of Ft. Henry on the Tennessee River, helped take the wounded to the rear in the two days' fight at Ft. Donaldson, 1862, was at Nashville, and at the battle of Pittsburg Landing, Apr. 6 and 7, 1862. After he was discharged he joined the O. N. G. and on May 2, 1864, was ordered to Wash., D. C., stationed at Ft. Richardson near the Arlington estate, in the defences of Washington, and was discharged as Corporal. Sept. 9, 1864.

He narrowly escaped being shot by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of a careless man lying on the ground in line of battle, while waiting the order to advance. Another narrow escape was when he and others had pitched their tent near a tree the top of which had been nearly cut off by a cannon ball from the enemy's fleet in the Tennessee River; they had not observed its condition. A gust of wind broke off the top, which fell, burying the broken end; the branches lopping over on the tent, crushed it to the ground, but without serious injury to anyone within. His sons are all college graduates.

The following extract is from a local newspaper at Glens Falls.

"Mr. Abbott was a deep thinker and a brilliant scholar, and his erudition was a principal factor in the enjoyment of his companionship. During his residence in Glens Falls he always manifested a deep feeling in religious, literary and educational matters, and he was always willing and eager to do all in his power to advance these interests in the community. When Henry Crandall conceived the idea of presenting Glens Falls with a free library, and carried the plan to a successful issue, Mr. Abbott was one of the first gentlemen selected as a trustee, and as a member of the library committee he had been prominently identified with the continued prosperity of that institution, and brought to its councils the practical results of a wide and ripe experience in the most advanced educational methods.

"Mr. Abbott will be sadly missed in the Lyceum. He was one of the earnest workers in that body of thinkers, and he was a familiar figure on the floor during the debates in the winter."

CAPT. THOMAS ABBOTT,

ROWLEY AND ANDOVER, ESSEX CO., MASS.

FOR several years after the Author had commenced the compilation of this work, it was supposed, for reasons given elsewhere, that Capt. Thomas Abbott was a son of George^r Abbott, of Rowley, Mass. When it was discovered that this was probably not the case, the perplexing, thankless task of finishing a compilation of his descendants was discontinued, as it was not the purpose of the Author to include in this Register any but the descendants of his own pioneer. It seemed a pity, however, not to publish what data had been collected concerning the descendants of Capt. Abbott, and as it would be disappointing to those now living who had supplied data of their families if he were not to do so, the Author finally decided to print what he has obtained.

The only lines of descent of this pioneer approximately complete are the Andover, Me., and Marblehead, Mass., branches; that of Andover, Me., is almost wholly so, but owing to the meagre data to be obtained from the early records of Marblehead, it has not been possible to make this branch of the family satisfactorily complete. The same can be said in regard to the Ashford, Ct., branch of the family, although research in this line was stopped when it was found that the descendants were probably not lineal descendants of George Abbott, of Rowley. At Ashford, in addition to meagre town, church, and even county records, one is confronted with the same given names as at Woodstock, Pomfret, and other near-by places, in different branches of the Abbott family of different pioneers, who were constantly moving from one place to the other. If the records, especially at Ashford, had been fairly well kept even for that day, it would still be difficult now to separate individual records, in all instances, even if each descendant could be identified.

The time given to this branch of the Abbott family and the additional labor involved in making necessary changes in compilation, etc., after it was found that Capt. Abbott was probably not a son of George¹ Abbott, of Rowley, has delayed the publication of this work fully two years or more, and especially as travelling for research in the rural districts, where public offices in small places were not kept constantly heated in winter, was dangerous to health, and impracticable.

FIRST AND SECOND GENERATIONS.

CAPT. THOMAS¹ ABBOTT was probably b. in England about 1632,* where he lived till about 1642, about which time he probably became a member of the family of George¹ Abbott, of Rowley, Essex Co., Mass. Capt. Abbott is mentioned in the will of George¹ Abbott's son Thomas,² Sr., and by his bros. George² and Nehemiah,² in the settlement of their bro. Thomas,² Sr.'s, estate as "brother," but the Ipswich Court records, 1647, indicate that probably after the death of George¹ Abbott, of Rowley, in that year, Capt. Thomas Abbott's father was probably living. George¹ Abbott's sons George,² Nehemiah² and Thomas,² Sr. (the two Thomases in George¹ Abbott's family being distinguished as Sr. and Jr.), were summoned before the Court at Ipswich in 1647 to show cause why Thomas, Jr., the subject of this sketch, should not be bound out. The Court decided that he should be, but gave a reasonable length of time before action should be taken, in order to give his father, whose name is not given in the Court proceedings, time to object, which probably indicates that he was living at too great a distance away either to be summoned before the Court, or to be communicated with at once concerning his son.

No such action as this would probably have been taken before George¹ Abbott's death; for if there had been, he would probably have been consulted in the premises as to his wishes, beforehand, and if practicable, would probably have been summoned before the Court instead of his sons, two of whom at least were minors. This is thought to indicate that Thomas, Jr., was not a son of George¹ Abbott, of Rowley, but he may have been, and probably was, a relative, as the physical characteristics of his living descendants are the same as those of the Rowley Abbotts.

* Suffolk Co. Court Files, i: p. 233.

Apparently Thomas, Jr., seems to have been virtually abandoned except by George¹ Abbott's family, and having grown up from a tender age with his sons, would seem to them like a brother; this, together with his pathetic, forlorn condition — being forever separated from his relatives in England in the wilds of a new continent, and the sons of George¹ Abbott, one of the first settlers, being similarly situated after the death of their father, and especially the two surviving real sons after their bro. Thomas,² Sr.'s death, on whom they probably largely relied after their father died, led them to regard Thomas, Jr., as a brother, especially in their early years, and he was accordingly so mentioned in Thomas, Sr.'s will, and afterwards in legal papers which Thomas, Jr., signed in the settlement of the former's estate.*

The amount willed by Thomas,² Sr., to Thomas, Jr., being just half as much as he willed to his real brothers, is also significant of no real brotherhood, as well as of many other things too numerous to mention. It is also noticeable, for it shows a lack of appreciation and tenderness under the circumstances, even if they were not brothers, that Thomas, Jr., named none of his six sons either George or Nehemiah; and the thought at this distant day that he should not have named one of his sons George, in memory of him who under unusual circumstances had cared for him at a time when he could not care for himself, is unsatisfactory. On the other hand neither did George or Nehemiah name any of their sons Thomas, which is remarkable, as there were two Thomases in their father's family, the elder being an able man, a leader after his father's death in the Rowley settlement, and very promising. It is noticeable that George,² Nehemiah,² and Thomas, Jr., each had a daughter named Mary, which was without doubt the name of George and Nehemiah's mother.

* The Compiler, owing to his mother's affliction, was, at a tender age, much thrown in the families of two of his aunts — Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Thompson — and being much with his cousins, neither family having any sons, these have always had a much more tender regard for him than perhaps they otherwise would (which is mutual), and have always looked upon him as a brother; and Percis Thompson being nine years his senior, and the eldest of these cousins having had charge of him when very young and attending district school together, always spoke of and introduced him to others as her brother, and addressed him in her letters all her life and remembered him in her will as such; and the children of the other cousins, although grown to middle age, have always addressed him as "uncle." So that three centuries hence, when the facts in the premises would not be known except for this statement, the actual relationship would be quite as obscure as is now that of Thomas, Jr., and the sons of George¹ Abbott, of Rowley.

Capt. Abbott¹ remained in Rowley till about 1659,* when he went to Concord, Mass., where he obtained employment for a time and then, about 1662,† went to Andover, Mass., where Dec. 15, 1664, he m. Sarah Steward. He testified on "10-12-1652," that he was about 20 yrs. old, in the trial of John Betts, of Concord, for killing his servant Robert Knights, and that Knights was a "fellow-servant."‡ He was a husbandman and lived in Andover where, with four others, he owned a mill privilege on "Cochichawicke River," on which permission was given in 1695, to his son-in-law, Capt. Joseph Chandler and his bro. Ens. Henry Chandler who m. Lydia³ Abbott, gr.-dau. of George² Abbott, of Rowley, Mass., to build a saw-mill "four rods above y^e lower ford, on condition that this do not stop the passage of the fish called alewives."§ He took the oath of allegiance to the King, Feb. 11, 1678, was doubtless Capt. of Militia in Andover, and d. there May 15, 1695.¶

Mrs. Abbott lived in No. Andover with her son Thomas² during her widowhood, and d. there Feb. 6, 1715/16, ae. 69 yrs. She and son Thomas were appointed admrs. of Capt. Abbott's estate, which inventoried May 3, 1695, £119: 18s.: 6d. There remained for distribution among his heirs, after paying all debts and deducting the widow's share, £17: 8s., of which Thomas, the eldest son, received a double share, and the other children the balance. The settlement of the estate as recorded is incomplete and obscure.¶ His land in the Andover Commons, Mar. 26, 1718, was inventoried at £515.

¶ Under the head of "Publick charges" at Rowley, Thomas Abbott is credited with bounty for wolves and foxes killed, and with pay for military services, but it is impossible to tell to which,—Thomas, Sr., or Thomas, Jr.—they should be credited. The charges are as follows:

1650, "for 2 wolves"	£2
1650, for "5 foxes"		12s.
1651, for "14 foxes"	£1	15s.
1654, for "one fox more"		2s. 6d.
1655, for "being a Soulger"		2s. 1d.

After the massacre of the Bradleys and others by Indians, Aug. 11, † 1746, about 2 mls. west on the Hopkinton, N. H., road, Lt. Chandler and his son Isaac were ordered to serve as a guard about the house of Rev. Timothy Walker. Jan. 2, 1747/8, Lt. Chandler and others of Rumford, petitioned Gov. Benning Wentworth, of N. H., to grant such protection as would encourage him to reoccupy his "abandoned garrison" and to protect his grist-mill, the only one in "the three towns that stood under the command of the guns of the garrison." Lt. Chandler and Jacob Pillsbury, of Rumford, made the following deposition regarding the Bow controversy, 1757:

"That there was no way for the people, in their power, to defend themselves against their [Indian] enemies, but by assembling together, by common agreement, as many families as conveniently could, and first erecting a fort or garrison sufficient to contain them, and their building within the same a house for each family, to screen them from the inclemency of the weather, and all this they did at their own expense. Moreover, by being obliged to keep watch and ward, and to work together in large companies for the greater safety during the summer; and their being called from their business — either by some assault or the discovery of the Indians — and other avocations occasioned by the War, the deponents really believe that the said inhabitants lost nearly one half of their time during the most busy and valuable part of the year; for all which they never, as the deponents heard of, had any allowance or consideration. And notwithstanding all these discouragements, they have stood their ground against the enemy; supported themselves with all the necessaries of life, and also yearly spared considerable quantities of provisions to the neighboring villages in the said Province — which must have suffered very much if they had not their assistance. And they have always been ready, upon notice of distress or danger among their neighbors, during the War, to go to their relief, many times in considerable companies, to places at a distance, all at their own expense; besides the losses they have sustained, not only of human lives, but also of their stock of cattle, many scores of which were destroyed at other times. . . .”*

†† In the Register of the Abbot Family (1847), p. 143, this family is wrongly placed among the descendants of George¹ Abbot, Sr., of Andover, Mass., who had a gr.-son by his son Nathaniel² (see p. 117, Abbot Reg., 1847), named Joshua,³ b. 1711, the same year that Joshua,⁴ son of Nathaniel,³ of Ashford, Ct., who was a descendant of George¹ Abbott, of Rowley, Mass., was b. This error necessitated a trip to Ashford by the Compiler, in order to examine the land, probate and town records, before the mistake could be rectified. The record also of the Abbot Register is that Samuel,⁵ of this family, was a Col. of Militia during the Rev. War. The printed Rev. Rolls of Ct. show but one Samuel Abbott, in Ct. who was Col. of Militia during that period. He was from Norwich, Ct., and was a descendant of George¹ Abbott, of Rowley, but belonged to another family, that of Capt. (sea) John¹ Abbott, of Norwich, only son of John³ Abbott, of Watertown, Mass., gr.-son of George¹ Abbott, of Rowley.

††† The Ashford town records contain no data pertaining to the families of any of these children, although from the Ashford land records it is apparent that Thomas and Samuel were still living there in 1764. There were also numerous descendants of George¹ Abbott, Sr., of Andover, living at Woodstock and Pomfret, and other nearby places in Ct., bearing some of the same names as those in this, and in the family of Nathaniel¹ Abbott, bro. of Joshua,⁴ of Ashford, some of whom also lived in Ashford. The living descendants of Nathaniel¹ and Joshua⁴ Abbott are the only ones for various reasons who can trace their lineage correctly back to this period, and they cannot be located by the Compiler, as there are no data to go by.

CAPT. BENJAMIN⁵ ABBOT (Joseph,⁴ Joseph,³ Joseph,² Thomas¹) was b. in Marblehead, Essex Co., Mass., Oct. 24, 1767, and m. there Dec. 15, 1793, Marcy, b. in 1770, dau. of John and Marcy (Brooks) Martin, of Marblehead, who it is claimed was a descendant of one of the early rulers of Brittany. She d. in Marblehead, Mar. 16, 1802 (g. s. r.), ae. 32 yrs. He m. (2d), Sept. 9, 1803, wid. Priscilla Homan, of Marblehead, who d. there Dec. 7, 1826. He was a master mariner and d. in Boston, Mass., on his birthday, Oct. 24, 1844, ae. 77 yrs (g. s. r.). Their remains are interred in the cemetery near the mills at Marblehead. A modest marble slab erected by his son has inscribed on it besides the names of his father and mother, his gr.-mother's, Marcy Martin, who d. Apr. 31, 1833, ae. 83 yrs., that of his maternal aunt, Nancy, who d. Dec. 25, 1869, ae. 81 yrs., wife of Thomas Gale, and that of his sis. Marcy. The following sentiment is also on the stone:

"We cant suppress the falling tear
 For those whom we have loved so dear;
 May angels guard them far away,
 In endless bliss and endless day."

Had 2 chil. (6th gen.), b. in Marblehead, Essex Co., Mass.:

- 145 Benjamin⁶ Abbot, b. Sept. 7, 1795; d. in Boston, Sept. 29, 1872, ae. 77 yrs.; m. Olivia Welch, b. prob. in Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 10, 1795. Early in life he was apprenticed to a cooper and for a time lived in Salem, Mass. He subsequently opened a cooper's shop in Boston, where by economy and persevering industry, and in Cuba, he amassed a fortune which at his death amounted to $171,673.44. His will, owing to his faithful remembrance of and generosity to his relatives, friends, etc., is even more of a monument to him than the stately and useful "Abbot Hall" he gave to the town of Marblehead, the place of his nativity. It is so unusual that, although there are two-score or more bequests, an abstract of them is given in full as an object lesson. His will, dated June 25, 1872, was probated Nov. 4, 1872, and Nathan B. Gibbs and Benjamin F. Burgess, merchants, Boston, are mentioned as executors. His bequests are as follows:

To the trustees of Tufts Coll., Medford, Mass., $5,000; to Dean Acad., Franklin, Mass., $2,000; to Benjamin and Jane R. Trask, $2,500 each; to Mrs. Mary B. Richardson and Mrs. Mercy Peach, of Marblehead, and Mrs. Nancy Fox, of Salem, Mass., daus. of my aunt Nancy Gale, decd., $3,000 each, and to Mary Fox my best Bible; to Mary B. Richardson, in trust for her four youngest chil. $8,000, and to her the land and dwelling-house thereon in Circle St., Marblehead, etc., during her life, after which it is to belong to her dau. Mrs. Mary Olivia (Richardson) Proctor; to Mrs. Mary P. Proctor (who was named for the testator's wife), $4,000, etc.; to William I. Proctor, husb. of Mary O., $300; to Knott V. Martin, Mrs. Hannah Selman and Mrs. Mercy Doliver, all of Marblehead, chil. of my uncle Knott Martin, decd., $500 each, etc.; to sd. Hannah Selman, in trust for her chil., $200 each, etc.; to chil. of my decd. aunt Nancy Prichard, as follows: to Mary $1,000; to William and Kate, of Slatersville, R. I., $500 each; to John $300; to Benjamin $500, etc., all chil. of Nancy Prichard; to cous., Mrs. Sarah Hill and Mrs. Mercy Wood, $500 each; to Sarah, dau. of Mrs. Mercy Wood, $300; to Laura, dau. of Mrs. Mercy Wood, $200; to Mrs. Mary Willey, of Kittery, Me., sister of the testator's wife, $3,000, etc.; to the chil. of said Mary Willey as follows: Lucy Frances and Mary Olivia $2,000 each; to William Augustus $1,500; to Henrietta Jane, wife of Daniel Littlefield, of Portsmouth, N. H., $1,500, and to him $500; to Elizabeth $300, all chil. of Mary Willey; to Dr. James Abbott Merrill, of Newburyport, Mass., $300; to Mrs. Mary A. Merrill, mother of sd. Dr. Merrill, $500; to William B. Sampson $300; to James Abbott Sylvester, son of Oakes, of Palmyra, N. Y., $300; to Abbott Bassett, son of Edward, of Chelsea, Mass., $500, etc.; to Elisha K. Perkins, "one of my foremen," $500, etc.; "to my other foreman," Samuel E. Oxden, $500, etc.; "to my wife's doctor," Harvey Sheldon, of Boston, $500; to Mary Holden, of Boston, $500; to her dau., Mrs. Emily Howe, $300; to Thomas Paine, of Marblehead, husb. of my decd. sis., $500; to Benjamin F. Peach, husb. of Mercy, $2,500; to the four chil. of sd. Benjamin F. Peach, Benjamin F., Jr., William, Thomas, Philip Henry, and John Samuel, $300 each, etc.; to George William Masters, son of my cous. Nancy Fox, $300; and $600 to sd. Masters in trust for his chil., etc.; to Benjamin F., William and Mary Jane, chil. of my cous. Benjamin Prichard, $300 each, etc.; to Francis M. Wade, bookkeeper of Benjamin Burgess & Sons, $1,000; to Sarah Prichard, dau. of my cous. Knott, $300; to William A. Peverly, "my barber," and Eben Turks, of Boston, $200 (each?); to John and wife Mary E. Goodrich, of Haverhill, $200 each, for kindnesses, etc.; to Mrs. Eliza M. Pray, housekeeper, $8,000, and all the household furniture in the house in Charlestown St., Boston, books (except the Bible given to Mary Fox), paintings (except such as were given to others), etc.; to Mrs. Elizabeth Collins, Boston, $300; to the Universalist Ch., Marblehead, $2,000, etc., and $500 to the Sunday Sch. of said ch.; to the S. S. 2d Univ. Ch., formerly located in School St., Boston, $300; to the Mass. Univ. Convention $3,000, to be kept perpetually as a permanent fund for the use of missions, the interest only to be used for such a purpose; to the Univ. Pub. House, $2,000.

After paying all the foregoing legacies, the balance of the estate was to be paid to the trustees of the town of Marblehead, Mass., "including the amounts or any of them bequeathed," in case any of said legacies should lapse and not take effect. "I have made this provision for the town of Marblehead because it was my birthplace. And it is my desire that a building shall be erected for the benefit of the inhabitants of such town, but I do not intend to limit the use of the legacy to that purpose, or to impose conditions which would prevent the use of it for such other general public objects as the inhabitants of such town may determine upon in that direction. I desire that my name shall always be attached to said fund," etc.

"I give the following in addition to the above legacies, to take effect before the residuary clause of this my will, viz.: To Lucy Frances Willey, above mentioned, my picture of Christ's Grave; to Mary Olivia Willey, above mentioned, my portrait and that of my wife; to Henrietta Jane Littlefield, above mentioned, my Mount Auburn picture; to Mary

ABBOT HALL, MARBLEHEAD, MASS.

Olivia Proctor, above mentioned, my picture of the Massacre in State St., Boston, in the Revolution; also my Map of the World and my Abbot Family Reg., etc."*

The amount given to the city of Marblehead for the erection of "Abbot Hall" and for other purposes was $103,000, of which $20,000 was expended for books for the library, which now has about 74,000 vols. The building is of red brick with stone trimmings, and was dedicated Dec. 12, 1877. On the ground floor are rooms for the several boards of town officers, a large reading-room, public library, and fireproof vault. The second floor is wholly devoted to an audience hall capable of seating about 1,200 people, and ante-rooms. The tower is 160 feet and 1 inch high. The view from the bell-deck is a fine one, not only of the city itself, which is one of the most quaint of any in America, but of an unusually picturesque harbor and landscape. The clock and bell in the tower are the gift of Hon. J. J. H. Gregory.

The reading-room and library are constantly frequented by readers of all ages, or have been whenever the Compiler has been there when open, and especially the reading-room by elderly laboring men, where the daily papers and other periodicals are kept. This spacious room has several fine, large, old paintings on its walls, master-pieces, the envy of the finest galleries in the country, the gifts of native townsmen. The subjects are "William, Prince of Orange, Selling his Jewels," "Christ and the Woman at the Well," "Crossing the Grand Banks," an "Arctic Scene," and Willard's famous historical painting, "Yankee Doodle, or the Spirit of '76," which was on exhibition at the Centennial Exposition, Phila., Pa., in 1876, and also at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, Ill. Of this wonderfully inspiring work of art, before which a professional soldier will stand entranced oblivious to all other surroundings, millions of copies have been made and circulated throughout the country; it was given to the town in 1880, by Gen. John H. Devereux, of Cleveland, O., "in memory of the brave men of Marblehead, who have died in battle on sea and land for their country." "The drummer-boy in the painting is a son of General Devereux, who was selected as a model without the knowledge of his father." In the auditorium on the second floor over the stage hangs a large, finely executed oil painting of the city's benefactor, Benjamin Abbot, who "was esteemed" by all who knew him "as a man of honor and integrity, and his genial disposition and ready sympathy endeared him to a large circle of friends." *

It is hard to conceive of a place where such a gift as "Abbot Hall" would be more appreciated than quaint Marblehead. Indeed, excepting the churches, it is about the only creditable public building in the place, the wealth of the city being limited to comparatively few families, and there being about 8,000 inhabitants. Mr. Abbot could not have disposed of a portion of his estate more appropriately than in this gift to Marblehead. It is a monument to his philanthropy, generosity and good judgment, equally as creditable as the gift of his illustrious kinsman, George Abbott, Lord Abp. of Canterbury, of the "Hospital of the Blessed Trinity" to the place of his nativity, at Guildford, County Surrey, England.

Mrs. Abbot d. in Boston in 1870, æt. 75 yrs. She was very domestic in her habits, unostentatious, patient and forbearing, and

DESCENDANTS OF DANIEL ABBOTT,

DANIEL ABBOTT of Cambridge, says Savage, probably came in the fleet with Winthrop, 1630. He asked for admission as freeman, Oct. 19, 1630, and was admitted May 18, 1631. This was previous to the union of the Colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay. To obtain this privilege it was necessary to be a church member. In 1635 he owned lots 15 and 16 on what were afterwards called Mount Auburn and Crooked or Holyoke Sts., near the Meeting-house, Cambridge, Mass. The latter lot, with a house thereon, was assigned him by the Proprietors' Committee, Oct. 10, 1635; this he afterwards sold to John Russell. He was fined 5s. for refusing to watch, May 18, 1638, which was remitted. He moved to Providence, R. I., 1639, and was one of 54 of the first settlers there to receive a "homelot in 16 —." The land of the Colony was deeded by Roger Williams and his wife Mary, 1638, and was afterwards divided into "homelots" and "six acre lots." In the clerk's office at Providence is "a revised list" — save corrections and additions — "of lands and meadows as they were originally lotted from the beginning of the Plantation of Providence in Narragansett Bay, N. E.," to the settlers.*

The record of the Colony is very meagre up to the time of Abbott's death in 1647 — the same year that George Abbott of Rowley, Mass., died — and very little is known of Daniel. There is no record of his family in Cambridge. He was evidently well-to-do for that day, and must have been able, as both his son Daniel² and gr.-son Daniel³ were prominent in the affairs of the Colony, the former being several years town clerk, mem. of the G. C., and the latter, a prosperous merchant, was much occupied with town affairs, a mem. of the Council, repeatedly a mem. of the G. C., and several times Deputy or Lt. Governor of the Colony. The family history is most interesting, but brief, as the male line of descent became extinct with the third generation. His wife Mary d. 1643, "or thereabouts." The only record of her is that of her death, which evidently was not made till some years afterward. The only record of the settlement of his estate is as follows: "The Court ordered 27th, 5th mo. 1650 (so called), that Nicholas Power and Gregory Dexter shall take the goods belonging to the children of Daniell [his name is spelled with two l's in all the records] Abbot decd. into their hands, and take notice of the Goats and also care for them, to see to the disposal of them and bring in a list into the town and record them."* On "28th of 5th mo. 1651," the Court ordered "that Thomas Harris and Nicholas Power shall equally divide the Goats and goods and what else that belongs to the orphans of Daniell Abbott, decd., and possesse Thomas Walling, husband of Mary Abbott, dau. of Daniell, with one half of the Goats and goods, &c., and the other half to order to Daniel, son of decd."† The following appears in the town records, Apr. 27, 1680, after his death: "Voted by the town that whereas there is noe record in or Town book now found extant that Daniell Abbott of Providence, decd. was an equal proprietor with y^e rest of y^e partners, though known to be, it is ordered that his son Daniell, heir by right of succession be now recorded a purchaser in place of his father." Mrs. Abbott must have been a capable woman, as her only son was one of the best and most painstaking town clerks of his time, and his education was probably largely due to her. The surname is spelled with two t's in the old records.

"ROGER WILLIAMS.

"For my well beloved & much respected the inhabitants of the Town of Providence."*

The foregoing, aside from its quaintness, shows the estimation in which the distinguished writer held Daniel¹ Abbott and his able family.

A Robert Calwell is mentioned in the records as a son-in-law of a Daniel Abbott, 1682. There may have been another dau. not mentioned in the records.

SECOND AND THIRD GENERATIONS.

DANIEL² ABBOTT (Daniel¹) was probably b. in New England. He m. in Providence, R. I., Dec. 25, 1678, "Margarett" Walling, widow probably, of Thomas, whose first wife was probably Daniel's sister Mary, as Thomas mentions wife "Margret" in his will and Daniel as his bro.-in-law, and made him one of the "overseers" of his (Thomas's) will dated July 19, 1674. Daniel took the oath to King Charles II, May 30, 1667: was mem. "Jury of tryalls" Apr. 27, 1668; hayward 1676; highway surveyor 1672, 1676, 1678, 1684; mem. com. on land distribution 1676; deputy town clerk 1673, and town clerk 1677-8 (he and Roger Williams being designated to receive the Town Books from the former clerk) 1679-80-1. He petitioned the town to build a town house 1679: was mem. com. on Rates 1679-

80, 1684, 1697-8; constable 1675, 1687; and mem. G. C., Oct., 1694. The records show that his wife had a turbulent spirit, which doubtless somewhat handicapped him, as in the midst of his career, about 5 yrs. after his m., he felt constrained to post her publicly.

This domestic infelicity, however, was evidently not lasting, for in Daniel's² will, dated 1700, the provisions for his widow were so liberal, and the terms imposed on his son Daniel,³ who had a brilliant career, were such that someone doubtless felt constrained to mutilate the will by cutting out the testator's signature and those of the witnesses, as well as a portion of the will before it was presented for probate. At any rate, the will in such a condition is now on file in the Probate Office at Providence, and of course could never be probated. Daniel's² house was on Weybosset St., on the east side of the river, — then probably, as now, one of the main business centres and thoroughfares of the city. He d. probably about 1700, as shortly after that date his will and the settlement of his estate were taken up by the Council. His will is dated "28th day of y^e 11th month, in y^e year 1700." Son, Daniel,³ and wid. "Margret," are named as exrs. The bequests are as follows: —

To dau. Mary, one-third of the homestead in Providence — i. e., of house, cellar, lots, swamp, orchard, &c. — for 20 yrs. after the testator's dec. or during her life if single, but if she should m. she was to be paid by bro. Daniel 20s. pr. year for 20 yrs. She was to have the use of the testator's bed-chamber, if necessary, but could neither sell, give or let her share of the est. to anyone but her brother; to wid. Margret, the other two-thirds of the homestead during widowhood and what stock she wanted, but if she m. two-thirds of her share of the est. was to go to son Daniel,³ and the other third to dau. Mary; to son Daniel,³ the northerly part of a new farm, or abt. 183 acs., and five other pieces of land of 75 acs. in all, together with one whole right of commonage in the Providence Plantation to be "hereditary" forever conditionally [will mutilated here: conditions cut out]. The balance or southern part of the first farm mentioned, about 175 acs., was given to son Daniel,³ to dispose of as he pleased, "either to [his] son, dau., sister or mother." Daniel³ was also allowed another lot of land of 70 acs., and a half right in certain commonage, to dispose of at will; but certain other commonage was to be kept for his son or dau., in case he had either or both, or otherwise for sister Mary if "overtaken by poverty." In case the legatee's gr.-child never m. and Daniel's² wid. d., the estate was virtually to go to the church, excepting two lots 40 feet square from the homestead in front of the house, which were given to the testator's "cousins" (?) Thomas and James Walling, and their offspring, etc. In case son Daniel³ was dissatisfied with the will, he was virtually disinherited. The will closes thus: "and my advice to my familie is to beware of doing any wrong to any man, and above all to bear and forbare one with y^e other and agree together (if possible) in the things y^t are just and equittable: and forgive one another, without you'll have noe grounds to expect you'll be forgiven. And wish you be timely to bethinks yourselves whereto you must come at last: And prepare yor hearts to make yor peace with God (weh is ye principall payrt of all:) even wth feare and reference, y^t his approaching may not be yor heads in peace wth satisfaction to yor Imortall soules & Assurance forever" etc.*

The records show that at five different Council meetings in Jan. and Feb., 1709/10, the principal business before them was the settlement of Daniel² Abbott's estate, but the proceedings were not fully or at first even partially recorded. Afterwards when the widow complained to the Council, Dec. 28, 1717, that she desired money from her late husband's estate for her support, her son Daniel³ being admr. was directed by the Council to supply her with 8s. pr. week, etc. Probably the son inherited some of his mother's turbulent spirit, at least so far as his relations with her were concerned; nevertheless he was wealthy, influential, enterprising, able, and one of the leading men of the Colony in his time.

He was Deputy or Lieut. Gov. of the Colony of R. I., May, 1738; Aug., 1738; Oct., 1738; Dec., 1738; Feb., 1738/9; July, 1739; Oct., 1739; Jan., 1739/40; Feb., 1739/40; and May, 1740.

He probably lived on Abbott St., near the No. Burying-ground, Providence, in the "Roger Mowry or Abbott House," built about 1653, and demolished in 1900 in order to erect a modern building. Originally it was, on the ground floor, a single-roomed story-and-a-half structure, with a large stone fireplace and chimney at one end, flanked on either side with cupboards, a ladder leading through a hole in the floor above to the attic, which for obvious reasons, in early Colonial days, was pulled up through the opening to the upper floor, when the last one had used it for the night. This veteran,—the old tavern where the Town Committee met and Roger Williams held prayer-meetings, about two and a half centuries old, and therefore an eye-witness to the town's history, a sharer in all its early struggles, sorrows and joys, and almost an embodiment of its early life,—alone of all the early houses of Providence was the last and only one standing in July, 1900. In vain was a public appeal made by the local press to preserve it. It had been much changed from time to time, or modernized to suit its owner, but the original shell or frame, etc., was still intact when demolished. An old elm tree about 164 yrs. old, which stood in the front yard, measured at its trunk 13 ft. 6 in. in circumference. A picture of both house and tree can be seen at the building of the R. I. Hist. Soc., Providence, vol. ii, R. I. Hist. clippings, under the head of "Elms of Providence, R. I."

As can be seen from the last Daniel's Abbott's will and most interesting inventory, which follows, this old house revelled in luxurious appointments in his day, as he was a man of means, a prosperous merchant, and lived in affluence. His will, dated July 2, 1760, was probated Nov. 17, 1760, and Jabez Brown and Darius Sessions, both of whom were Deputy Governors of the Colony several times after Abbott's death, are named as exrs. His bequests were as follows:—

To nephew, Thomas Fenner, annual rents of farm near Providence, during life; exrs. were authorized to sell so much of his "out Lands" as necessary to pay his debts, excepting the aforesaid farm, the homestead, a farm lying partly in Johnston and Cranston, and all the Parker farms in Scituate; to cousins Abbott and Antram, sons of nephew Thomas Fenner, Samuel, Daniel and Thomas, sons of nephew Daniel Fenner, William and Stephen, sons of nephew William Fenner, and to Jabez and Oliver, sons of niece Mary Bowen, all his houses, lands and tenements, and real estate entire, to be equally divided. His nephew Samuel Fenner, being of age, was to enter upon his estate after paying Exrs. £1,000, to be applied towards the redemption of nephew Daniel Fenner's lands mortgaged to Dr. Ephraim Bowen, of Providence; and cousin Jabez Bowen was to pay the same sum for the same purpose when, at age, he entered upon his estate, etc. A codicil dated Sept. 15, 1760, stipulated that rents of the estate should be used to pay the debts of same till canceled, after which daus. "however named," of nephews Thomas, Daniel and William Fenner, were to receive annual legacies of £100 each, the balance of rents to be expended in improving the estate.*

The following is an extract from the inventory of his personal est., taken Nov. 17, 1760, which amounted to £3,928: 10s.:

A letter dated Aug. 20, 1794, from Jabez Bowen, of Providence, to John Mason, Pres. of the Council, found among the records, states that he and Gov. Sessions, exrs. of Daniel Abbott's est., having been appointed guardians to some of the heirs for 10 yrs. after the decease of Abbott, were never able to settle his personal est., and requested that the town council at its next meeting be convened at Richard Olney's house, so that Gov. Sessions, who was old and infirm, could attend in person. A final settlement was made Oct. 1, 1795. The following-named heirs received, each, £100, Old Tenor, equal as pr. receipt in lawful money to £4: 5s.: 9d: Sarah Randall, Elizabeth Sherman, Christian Thornton, Christⁿ Thornton in right of his wife, Anna Fenner, decd., Penelope Fenner, Lydia Waterman, Roby Fenner, the heirs of Phebe Carpenter, and the heirs of Mary Fenner. The following heirs received, each, £1: 17s.: 10³/₄d.: Samuel Fenner, Jabez and Oliver Brown, William and Thomas Fenner, heirs of Daniel Fenner, heirs of Antram Fenner, and George Fenner, son of heir of Abbot Fenner, decd. The Fenner family of Providence is an old and very distinguished one. Apparently, from Daniel's Abbott's will, the descent in the male line closed with him, as no bequest is made to anyone bearing the name, nor can any record be found of his having had any children.

DESCENDANTS OF GEORGE ABBOTT,

GEORGE^r ABBOTT, of Norwalk, Fairfield Co., Ct., is first mentioned in Hinman's Catalogue of the Names of the First Puritan Settlers of the Colony of Connecticut, 1648, in which year his name first appears in the Colony records. According to the early Norwalk records he was a man of thrift and enterprise, and prominent in the affairs of the town. His house-lot was not on the "Towne Street," but comprised land from the commons north of the LeCount house of 1900, in East Norwalk. His immediate neighbors whose lots bordered on his were Thomas Lupton on the north, through whose lot the N. Y., N. H. & H. Ry. to-day runs; Matthew "Sention" [St. John] on the west towards Norwalk River, and Nathaniel Hayes and Stephen Beckwith on the east side; the south side was near the "gravel beach" or salt marsh, the land bordering which, next to Abbott's, being later owned by J. E. and C. E. St. John. In the records mention is made of the Town Committee's having laid out to him 2 acs. of land on the further end of "Stickey playne near the place of plum trees," which was willed to his son "Daniell" and recorded Jan. 17, 1699. This was probably one of the first allotments of land made to him, but the date is not given. The first record of his having disposed of land in Norwalk was in 1652, when he sold 1 ac. and 4 rds. "in the Stoney Hill Division in the planting field called the Neck," to Thomas Fitch, of Norwalk, which locates Abbott here several years earlier than before mentioned,* and still he must have been in Norwalk some time before this, probably as early as 1649.

Dr. Stiles, the author of Ancient Windsor, Ct., mentions him as probably identical with the boy, George Abbott, who, says Selleck,† probably engaged himself for service in order to pay his way to America, in accordance with a custom with some at that early day. At any rate he was afterwards in service at Windsor, 1640; was fined £5 there then, for the youthful indiscretion of selling a pistol and some powder to the Indians; was bound by the Court for his good behavior and disposed of by it for future service with his master; was in Hartford, 1647-8, and was fined to Richard Letten, 1647, for 12s. Abbott and another man of Windsor, having lived with the Indians, were instrumental in settling with those of Massacoe (the Indian name for Simsbury), Ct., for burning the tar and pitch of John Griffin, of Windsor, June 28, 1648; the Indians conveyed their land at Massacoe — except 2 acs. reserved for their own use — to Griffin, and he assigned his Indian deed, Dec. 23, 1661, to the Committee which had been appointed to dispose of the land at Massacoe for the use of the town of Windsor. Abbott was also defendant in a suit for debt and damages of 30s., in Hartford, Dec. 28, 1648. Soon after this he probably settled in Norwalk. He was twice married, but the name of his first wife is not known. He married (2d), Mrs. Johanna Williamson, of Boston, who had three children by a previous marriage.

The Norwalk records have much of interest and credit regarding him. There are entries of many assignments of land by the Town Committee to him, and many purchases and sales of land by him, during the two score years he was probably there before his death, about 1689. One assignment of land to him and Thomas Betts, of interest, was a spruce swamp on the "Neck and planting field," for which they agreed to provide the town with 300 chestnut planks for the meeting-house; ‡ and another similar assignment to him and Matthew Campfield was certain land "on the other side of the River," bounded east and north by their land at Duck Pond, for which they were to pay the town 30s. in such manner and time as "the Town should order them about — meeting-house."§ His landed estate, etc., was valued, 1671, at £75. There were 64 settlers, 32 of whose estates exceeded that amount, and 31 were less. It was voted, Feb.

9, 1671/2, that all having children should have £5 "for every child now in being," he then having seven. His landed estate was valued June 3, 1687, at £125, there being then 78 settlers.

He was marshal, 1659/60, 1660/1; "townsman," 1664; "pounder," 1667/8 (his yard for a pound), 1674/5; was chosen to sweep, and was paid 14s. for sweeping the meeting-house, 1674/5; 16s., 1675; and 20s. for the same, 1679-80. "Sergeant Abbott" was also "surveyor," 1688; his military title shows that he had been chosen to office in the train-band of the town, which in that day was a distinguished honor,* usually conferred on one of the leading citizens; but there is no other known record or intimation of it. He doubtless held other town offices of which there is no record. In the preparation of his work the Compiler has found many of his descendants all through the different Northern and Western States, his descent being numerous and good. His will, dated May 2, 1689, was recorded Mar. 11, 1690, according to the Abbot Reg. (1847), but the Compiler has been unable to find it either at Norwalk, Fairfield, New Haven or Hartford, Ct. His first wife's name is not mentioned in any of the records so far as known.

Not having followed Abbott's descendants from place to place by deeds and wills, or by town, church, and other records, as in the case of George Abbott of Rowley, Mass., the Compiler feels constrained to say that he cannot vouch for the arrangement of some families beyond the second generation, except in the case of the family of George² Abbott of Norwalk, whose children's names are taken from his will. George of Norwalk, and Robert Abbott of Branford, had descendants bearing the same given names, and both the Abbot Register (1847) and Hall's and Selleck's Histories of Norwalk have these descendants somewhat confused. So little interest has been shown on the part of living descendants, that the Compiler has not felt warranted in going to much expense or trouble in investigation, giving only what has been incidentally found in looking for the descendants of George Abbott of Rowley, Mass. The names of the following children have been taken from old deeds, the Abbot Register (1847), and from the History of Norwalk. The surname is usually spelled with two t's in old records. The children's names may not be arranged in the order of birth.

* At that period one of the duties of a Sergeant was to command the settlers in a military sense, whenever necessary, during his term of office.

DESCENDANTS OF ROBERT ABBOTT,

OF

1

ROBERT¹ ABBOTT (spelt Abbitt in the Col. Recs.) according to Dr. Bond, was admitted freeman in Watertown, Mass., Sept. 3, 1634. He was granted 35 acs. in the fourth division of land there, July 25, 1636, at another time 3 acs., and at still another 3 acs. of meadow, a homestall of 10 acs., and 35 acs. of upland.* He was one of a small colony from that place 1640, who settled what they first called Watertown, but afterwards Wethersfield, Ct. The records show that he was juryman for the "Particular Court," Hartford, Ct., July 12, 1640, and Sept. 2, 1641. The New Haven Colonial records show that he was No. 30 in a list of 70 freemen of the "Court of New Haven," and that he was made a member of the Court on the "6th of the 6th month, 1642"; that the Court at New Haven, on the "5th of the 2d month, 1643, freed" him "frō trayning by reason of bodily infirmityes"; that he took the oath to the King, July 1, 1644; that his demand for satisfaction for damage done by hogs in the oyster-shell field was "respited" by the Court, Jan. 2, 1644; that at his own request land was laid out to him "on the East side, in such a form" as would be "convenient to fence and improve" Feb. 24, 1644; this was probably at Totoket, now Branford, Ct., to which place he probably moved 1645. He and three others whose "oyster-shell fences" were reported defective, were directed by the Court, May 6, 1645, to pay the "viewers" for their loss of time in viewing the fences and in attending the court. His goats having strayed into forbidden limits but having done no damage, on Aug. 5, 1645, he "desired the judgment of the Court whether he was eligible to pay 6*d.* a head by virtue of the order against goats." He was one of the appraisers of the estate of John Plume, of "Toboket," Sept. 4, 1648.* He d. in Branford, Sept. 31, 1658. John Robins was administrator of his estate, which inventoried, as near as can be made out from the faded town records, Dec. 28, 1658, for £143:13*s.* The Court decided May 25, 1659, that 10^{li} should be given the widow from the estate, which probably netted "£120 or 130^{li} or thereabouts," to help her in defraying the expenses in bringing up the two younger children. The balance of the estate was equally divided between the widow and children. The settlement was referred to the Court at Branford. He d. intestate.†

* Watertown, Mass., recs.

He had chil. by both wives, but the birth dates of those by the first marriage cannot be found. They were doubtless b. during the Bohemian period of his life on the frontier, before settling at Branford; and so no public record will probably ever be found of them. The name of his first wife is not known unless it was Mary. His widow's name was Mary, according to Savage, who says she m. (2d), Nov. 4, 1659, John Robins; but the Branford records show that Robins married Maria Abbott on that date, who was probably Robert's wid. or one of his elder daus. The only dau. of this name, however, is mentioned last among the younger children, as a minor, eight years later, when Robert's estate was distributed among his heirs. His widow's name, if mentioned at all in the distribution of the estate, is included among the children's names without distinction, only eight of whom are named. As the early pioneers were careless about making out their public records, her name may be so mentioned or wholly omitted. He certainly left a widow, for the fact is mentioned in the Colonial records. The settlement of his estate is dated Nov. 4, 1667. The elder children had received most of their shares. There was due Peter £1:5*s.*; Sarah, whose share was received by her husband Matthew Rowe, £5:9*s.*; and Deborah £7:9*s.*, all of whom were probably chil. by the first wife. The minors, chil. evidently by the 2d wife, John, Joseph, Daniel, Abigail and Maria, were to receive £10:9*s.*, each, when of age. John Robins was guardian to Abigail and receipted for her share of the estate.‡

‡ Branford t. r.

The birth dates, etc., pertaining to this family are so conflicting in the various works found, that the dates especially have been almost wholly taken from authorities in the Branford library.* The descendants after the fourth generation are to some extent taken from the Abbot Register (1847), no attempt having been made to collect data in this line except at Branford, New Haven, Cornwall, Wallingford and Guildford, Ct. The other data are such as have been obtained during the search for the descendants of George Abbott, of Rowley, Mass. No effort has been made to give an exhaustive sketch of the male head of any family in this line except the pioneer at Branford, as that can only be done by a personal examination of the town, church, county, Colonial and other records where they have lived.

SECOND AND THIRD GENERATIONS.

PETER² ABBOTT (Robert¹), according to the New Haven Colonial Records, was not permanently located anywhere, but "lived sometimes in one plantation and sometimes in another." He m. Elizabeth Everts, dau. of John, and at the time of his lunacy and death Oct. 16, 1667, lived in Fairfield, Ct. He was insane and had been for several years before his death. According to Vol. III, p. 300, Colonial Records of New Haven, the Magistrates and deputies of Branford were informed that

"Peter Abbott coming thither the last year [1658] to help his father weed corn, was taken the same day with lunacy; which occasioned much charge and exercise to his town, wch they conceived should be bourn by the publike, he being no settled inhabitant there, but had lived sometimes in one plantation and sometimes in another, and that if it should please God again to exercise him, they saw not how the people of [200] Branford (having been under the afflicting hand of God) could be able to supply him wth such things as his condition would call for, to wch the Court answered, that they saw not but yt Branford to whom he did belong, must in justice bear it, but withall it was pmised that if God should so again afflict them in Peter Abbott, they will have a brotherly respect to them and if there be cause, help them in a way of mercy, as this Court shall think best."

Peter was executed for killing his wife, and for attempting to kill his only child, in Fairfield, 1658. His estate inventoried Nov. 4, 1667, for £37: 1s: 7d.

UNASSIGNED ABBOTTS.

ABIGAIL, Seth and Joseph Abbott are unassigned. The names of their parents are not known to the Compiler, but can doubtless be found by those interested, by an extended research of old records. Abigail m. Nathan Josling, in New Haven, Ct., Nov. 15, "1719/20." Seth is mentioned on page 175 of the Abbot Register (1847) as having moved from Branford to Cornwall, Litchfield Co., Ct., but this is doubtful. It is probable that he was a descendant of George Abbott, of Norwalk, for the name is common among his descendants — Ebenezer⁴ and Jesse,⁴ cousins, both having sons Seth, each of whom m. within a year at Wilton, Ct., and each were probably Lieutenants in the Rev. War, as two Second Lieutenant's commissions were issued to a Seth Abbott within a few months of each other, during the war. An extended examination of old deeds and records will doubtless show which of the Seths mentioned lived at Wilton and Cornwall. Abijah Abbott, of Lenox, Mass., was without doubt also a descendant of the Norwalk Abbotts. The Cornwall Ch. recs. show that an Anna Abbott m. Thomas White, 1774, and that Hannah Abbott m. Daniel Squire, 1761. They were probably sisters or cousins of Seth Abbott, of Cornwall.

The following is from the Abbot Register (1847): they are chil. of Seth,¹ of Cornwall:

- 1 Seeley² Abbott, b. —.
- 2 Nathan² Abbott, b. —.
- 3 Abel² Abbott, b. —.

DESCENDANTS OF WALTER ABBOTT,

OF

WALTER ABBOTT was a "vintner," according to Savage, probably in Exeter, N. H., 1640. He is first mentioned in the Portsmouth, N. H., records, Apr. 5, 1652, when 21 of the settlers, including himself, after selecting five "townsmen," signed an agreement relating to the distribution of land, etc., to abide by their decisions in the government of the settlement, etc. (t. r., p. 1.) Prior to this the records of the settlement, which was first made by ten Englishmen, 1623, for the principal purpose of Indian fur-trading, were destroyed by the settlers when they thought them of no further use, and from other causes, so that the exact time of Abbott's arrival here is not known. There are no ch. records there extant prior to about 1700. He was assigned a one-acre lot, on which he probably lived in a log-house, as one is mentioned in the inventory of his estate after his d., 1667. On Jan. 22, 1660/1, he was assigned 99 acs. more by the townsmen, making in all 100 acs.; the married male children of the colony and all over 21 yrs. of age receiving about 13 acs. each, which was allowed his eldest son, Peter. Land was distributed to 91 settlers on this date, only 11 others receiving more, each, than he, two others the same amount, each, and the other 77 less, each, which made him one of the leading proprietors in point of wealth. He and his wife, Sarah, sold a log-house and lot near the meeting-house at Strawberry Bank for £119: 15s.: 1½d., Jan. 8, 1663.* On Jan. 1, 1656/7, he had the "hole consent to keep an ordinaire as other ordinaries doe," which probably means that he was licensed to keep tavern in Portsmouth. He was highway surveyor, 1658; mem. proprietors' committee, Feb. 6, 1660, and Feb. 15, 1664; and selectman, 1664. He subscribed 15*s.* for the support of the minister, 1658. He d. in "Jamamaica" before 1675.* His wid. Sarah m. (2d), Henry¹ Sherburne, of Portsmouth, whose first wife was Rebecca, dau. of Ambros Gibbons. It was probably Sherburne's son, Henry,² who m. Dorothy, sister of Lieut.-Gov. Wentworth, and was appointed councillor, 1728, and was also Chief Justice. Abbott's name in deeds, etc., is usually spelled with two t's, his signature being by mark. His will, dated May 16, 1667, was probated June 26, 1667, and his wife, "Sara," is named as exrx. His bequests were as follows: To wife, "Sara," entire personal estate, she paying all legacies and debts; to son, Peter, "a double portion of my lands;" to sons William, Walter and John, and daus. Sarah Wills, Mary and Elizabeth, £5 each, in land; to gr.-sons Thomas and Joseph (probably sons of Thomas) and gr.-dau. "Sara" Wills, 40*s.* each. The inventory of his estate is dated June 18, 1667, and consisted principally of 155 acs. of land and buildings, including an "old log" and two other houses, etc., valued at £1,433: 3*s.*: 8*d.*, a goodly estate for that day.† He was made a freeman, July 14, 1657.‡

Had 8 chil. (2d gen.):

- 2 Peter² Abbott was probably b. about 1639, as he was of age about 1660, when he was granted 13 acs. on the distribution of land to the settlers in Portsmouth, Jan. 22, 1660/1, being the only son of his father of age. As he was also the eldest son he received by will a double portion of his father's estate, of land, and receipted to his mother Feb. 20, 1667, for £10, pertaining to the settlement of the ‡ Unlike the descent of George Abbott of Rowley, Mass., which scattered all over the world, Walter¹ Abbott's descent for the first 150 yrs. was largely confined to Portsmouth and nearby places in N. H., and to York Co., Me.; but unfortunately less attention was paid to making a public record of the marriages, births and deaths than in any other pioneer family of the name. There is no public town record whatever to be found of the first two generations, and an incomplete record of barely a half-dozen families for the first century and a half or more afterwards, although the deeds show that his descent was prolific at Portsmouth, Dover, and other places in N. H., and in York Co., Me., and especially at York, Berwick, and Shapleigh; indeed, there is hardly a town in the Co. but what had more or less of his descendants at one time or another. Nevertheless, owing to the fact that no public record of the vital statistics was kept of the family as before mentioned, that there is a record of but few wills, and that those at Portland, Me., where the deeds show that there were many descendants in Cumberland Co., have been recently almost wholly destroyed by fire, it will be a difficult and perplexing matter ever to make even an approximate compilation of Walter Abbott's descendants, for it will be hard, and probably impossible, to separate the families of any of his sons except Thomas, whose chil. are named in his will.

estate.* He sold his division land in Portsmouth, Jan. 5, 1668.† and gave up his right in his father's estate in Portsmouth to his mother May 20, 1680, so she could pay its indebtedness.‡ He was a carpenter, and probably lived in Portsmouth. Whether it was he or a namesake who was a mem. of the garrison of the fort at Saco, Me., under John Hill, and was reported drowned Apr. 8, 1695, is not known, but as he would have then been about 56 yrs. old, it was probably another Peter. The bread ration having given out, when Peter Abbott and two others were "about two gunshots off from ye fort getting ground nuts for to eat with there meat, ye Indians came upon them," carrying two into captivity, and he was drowned in the Saco river trying to escape.§ He was evidently not thrifty, as his name does not appear as grantor, except when he disposed of his division and inheritance lands, and not at all as grantee. The name of his wife, if he m., is not known, nor can the names of his chil. if any, be established with certainty, as no public record of their births can be found. Possibly the Peter Abbott drowned at Saco, 1695, was one of his chil., but there were still other Peter Abbotts left in Portsmouth afterwards. Peter² d. before 1709 (see Exeter, N. H. Deeds).

- 3 Sarah² Abbott, b. —; d. before 1709; m. Thomas Wills; was deeded by bros. Peter, John, and Walter, in accordance with decd. father's wishes, the house and land at Crooked Lane, Kittery, Jan. 30, 1688; || had a dau. Sarah,³ who m. Mr. Gere, who had a son Samuel⁴ who res. in Kittery.¶
- 4 Thomas² Abbott, b. about 1643.
- 5 William² Abbott, b. —; prob. d. y.: not mentioned either in deeds or wills except his father's; no rec. of m. or chil. to be found.
- 6 Walter² Abbott, b. —.

He was a Calvinist Baptist minister; differed with Ch. on close communion, and became an Ind. Congl. minister in Coventry, R. I.; recd. and accepted call from 1st Congl. Ch., Pitt (now Court) St, on site of Unitn. Ch., Portsmouth, the soc. having been formed from dissenting mems. of other churches; moved from Coventry July 7, 1758.

"Sometime in Mr. Drown's ministry here, Robert Sandeman came to Portsmouth and was admitted into Mr. Drown's pulpit. He preached therein several times, but did not fully develop his religious sentiments (though the doctrines he preached were generally in accordance with those of Mr. Drown and his church) until he more fully announced them on the occasion of his preaching from Luke ii: 28-32. In opening his discourse, Mr. Sandeman said: 'Some persons read this passage in this manner — that he took the child in his heart, but my Bible says he took him in his arms.' Mr. Drown, from this circumstance, discovered that Mr. Sandeman entertained the doctrine which afterwards distinguished him and his followers as a distinct religious sect. While Mr. Sandeman was making the concluding prayer, Mr. Drown selected from Watts' Hymns, 13th, book 1st:

' If love of God and love of man
Be absent, all our hopes are vain:
Nor tongues, nor gifts, nor fiery zeal
The works of love can e'er fulfill.'

"When he had concluded his prayer Mr. Drown rose to read the hymn, and as he was proceeding, Mr. Sandeman took his hat. Mr. Drown observing this, stepped to the pulpit door before Mr. Sandeman reached it and held it to, so that he could not pass until he had concluded. Mr. Sandeman, then compelled to remain, repeatedly exclaimed, 'I hate the very breath of it.' After Mr. Drown had concluded he opened the pulpit door, saying, 'Now, sir, you can go, if you please.'"

ENS. THOMAS² ABBOTT (Walter¹), of Upper Kittery, now Berwick, York Co., Me., was probably b. about 1643, second son, although he is not mentioned in his father's will. It is stated in a York deed (Book iv, fol. 56.) that he was 43 yrs. old, Mar. 25, 1686; and in an Exeter deed (Vol. xi, p. 259), dated Sept. 1, 1709, that he was the "only surviving son and heir of Walter Abbott," decd., late of Portsmouth, N. H.; and but for this there would have been no documentary evidence in this country, so far as known, to place him. He was probably the most capable and thrifty of the sons, and was

He was granted 60 rods "in length backward into y^e woods from y^e end of his house lot by y^e same bredth of his house lot": also 50 acs. Oct. 12, 1670; and 40 acs. Joseph Hamond," July 2, 1678;† was a mem. of the Upper Kittery garrison of ten men, Apr. 30, 1690;‡ and was wounded in an Indian fight in the Eastern Expedition along the coast of Me., Aug. 7, 1691. He was a mem. of the committee to build the meeting-house in Berwick, 1701; was town-meeting moderator, Sept. 2 and 20, 1709; was one of eight from the Parish of Berwick to petition the G. C. for pecuniary aid for certain improvements; was foreman of a jury, no date:§ and was gr.-juryman, 1693-4-5-6. He sold 80 acs. of land in Portsmouth while he lived at "Newchowannick" (now Dover, N. His will dated May 20, 1707, was probated Apr. 23, 1713, and wid. Elizabeth and sons John and Walter are named as exrs. He made the following bequests:—

WALTER² ABBOTT (Walter¹) was probably b. in America, and doubtless lived in Portsmouth, Rockingham Co., N. H., where he probably d. before 1709. There is no public town record of his m., or of the names of his wife and chil. His son John³ mentions in his will an acre of land assigned to his father, Walter² Abbott, on Great Island, in Newcastle, N. H., and but for this none of his chil. could be identified. Walter² is seldom mentioned in the Exeter deeds, either as grantee or grantor. There is no trace of his will, in case any was made, in any of the probate or other records.

CAPT. JOHN² ABBOTT (Walter¹), the sailor and fisherman, was probably b. in Portsmouth, Rockingham Co., N. H. He bought part of an island of Tobias Lear, of Portsmouth, Aug. 16, 1701.* He was granted an acre of land at Newcastle, on the "Great Island," Apr. 4, 1678, where he probably lived till June 12, 1680, when he was admitted to the town of Biddeford or Saco, Me.; was town clerk there, 1680-1-2; "commissioner from the shiretown" to York, Aug. 16, 1680; townsman, 1681; constable, 1685; and selectman, 1688. He was granted 40 acs. of upland and some marsh in Saco, Sept. 23, 1681, which was sold by his son John, of Portsmouth, Dec. 13, 1717. The town records of Biddeford are missing from 1688 to 1717, so the balance of his record there is lost. He was what was known as a coaster; and Oct. 12, 1676, commanded a vessel of 30 tons sent from Piscataqua to move the effects of a planter from Richmond Island. He was accompanied by two citizens and eight soldiers from Black Island Point, near Portsmouth. While loading the boat they were surprised by Mogg's Indians and captured. Abbott and three or four others were carried into captivity by the eastern Sagamores who embarked in his vessel, into Sheepscoot river, Abbott, of course under compulsion, sailing the boat for them. The following February he was ordered by the Indians to take eleven of them to Penobscot. The weather being windy, he so steered his boat as to alarm them, when they ordered him to run into Cape Bona Wagon, where eight of them landed. He claimed the boat could not sail safely there, and so ran to Damaris Cove, where the other Indians landed, leaving him to care for the boat, which was what he wanted. Having greased the mast he succeeded in hoisting sail, and escaped to the Isles of Shoals, arriving Feb. 19, 1677. The other captives were sooner or later released.* His "Shallopp" was impressed 1706-7, on an expedition eastward against the French and Indians.† The N. H. Provincial Papers give the names of probably two of his sons, who were Indian captives at different times. It was probably he who petitioned Dec. 13, 1705, for the release of his son John, who was held as hostage by the French and Indians.‡ There is no record to be found of his m., or of the names of his wife and chil. The plantation had been so much disturbed by Indian wars prior to his going to Saco, the records there were lost.

THOMAS³ ABBOTT (Thomas,² Walter¹) was probably b. in Berwick, York Co., Me., prior to 1667, as he is mentioned in his gr.-father's will which is dated then; but Thomas³ evidently had no chil. in 1707, the date of his father's will, or they would probably have been named, as a gr.-child is mentioned in the female line of descent. This fact is noted because, apparently, Thomas³ m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Keey, of Salmon Falls, Me., then Berwick, wid. of James Emery, Jr., of Berwick, who was b. about 1692, which would make her fully 27 yrs. younger than Thomas³; but as he was the only one of the family known as bearing the name of Thomas in Berwick, she was probably his wife. She d. in Berwick, May 26, 1789, ae. 89 yrs. She testified Apr. 30, 1748, when 75 yrs. old, that she had lived at Salmon Falls with her father "62 yrs. past." § Probably Thomas³ d. before 1738. MISCELLANEOUS ABBOTTS.

QUITE a goodly number of Pioneers of the Abbott family not mentioned in the Abbot Register, of 1847, have been found by the Compiler in his research in the Northern, Western and Southern States, but as no record was kept of some of those first discovered, and as the Compiler's notes are too numerous and voluminous to look up the data of all of such as were noted, all of them will not be mentioned. Some of them are as follows: —

REV. HENRY ABBOTT was the son of Rev. John Abbott, Canon of St. Paul's, London, England. He left home while young, without the consent or knowledge of his parents, came to America and settled in Camden Co., N. C. He was fairly well educated, and engaged principally in school teaching until he became an itinerant Free Will Baptist preacher. He afterwards acknowledged that he was baptized before he was converted. About 1764 he took charge of the Ch. in Camden Co., N. C., where he remained many years. The old records at Currituck, Camden and Pasquotank County-seats, and especially at Camden, Camden Co., have much about him. He was a man of strong mind, very orthodox, well acquainted with ch. discipline, of distinguished character, was much esteemed by men of standing in the County where he resided, and was very successful as a statesman. He was several times chosen a member of the State Conventions; was a mem. of the Provincial Congress, representing Pasquotank Co., which met at Halifax, N. C., Nov. 12, 1776, when the State Constitution was formed and adopted, and it was to him the people were indebted in a measure for some of their religious rights. He was also a mem. of the Convention for the consideration of the Federal Constitution, and at the time of his election had a greater number of votes than any man in the County. He d. May, 1791.* His descendants are numerous through the Carolinas, and especially in Marion Co., S. C., where they have been prolific. The Compiler has much material concerning his descent, which is good, but a descendant of local note in Camden Co., having taken the Will of Elder Henry Abbott from the Camden records, the names of his children could not be obtained.

This descendant, after having stated by letter in effect that he was the self-constituted custodian of the will, having taken it from the County seat, was informed that if he would supply the names of Elder Abbott's children, so that the different lines of descent could be identified, the Compiler would gladly publish such data as he had, but the request was ignored. Several of the living descendants were seen in different localities, and in physique somewhat resemble the Rowley Abbots.

WALTER ABBOTT received a Royal Land Grant of 140 acs., lying on a neck of land near the west side of Edisto Island, near Charleston, S. C., July 15, 1697, paying annually 1s.: 4*l.*: 3*f.*, at the rate of £20 per 100 acs.; also 140 acs. in Colleton Co., S. C., near the west side of Edisto Island, Nov. 1, 1697, at the same ratio: also 339 acs. in Colleton Co., on Edisto Island, May 10, 1700, paying annually 3s.: 4*l.*: also 390 acs. in Colleton Co., on Edisto Island, May 4, 1700, paying at the rate of 3s.: 11*a. He is mentioned as a carpenter of Edisto Island, in an old deed dated Dec. 13, 1700, wherein he sold 140 acs. of land on said island for an Indian woman.

JOSEPH and FRANCES ABBOTT were early settlers in Halifax Co., Va. He was a planter. His will is dated Mar. 30, 1789, and the exrs. named are son, William, and Nathaniel Manning. He made the following bequests:

To wife, Frances, use of est. during life, provided she remained single, except about 150 acs. of land on which son William lived; to son Benjamin one shilling; to son William, about 150 acs. of land on which he lived; to son Richard, about 150 acs., "my house and plantation whereon I now live;" to son Leonard, 100 acs. of land; to son Moody, the remainder of the land (amount not stated); to three younger sons, John, Moses and Flemmon, "a negro wench named Fan," and all the horses, at the dec. of both parents; to three elder daus., "Annay," Sarah and Rachel, and to son Joseph, a negro named Sandon (?) to be sold and money equally divided; to four younger daus., Mary, Elizabeth, Frances and Patty, a negro girl named Hanna (?) and her increase, to be sold by exr. and money equally divided, etc.

* Book xxxviii: pp. 328, 381, 429, Columbia, S. C., Rec.

His will was probated Oct. 27, 1789.* Moses and Flemmon were importers for a time at Richmond, Va. One of them probably d. in Havana, Cuba. John, Richard and William d. in Halifax Co., Va. William was for a time a courier for Gen. Washington during the Rev. War. He d. about 1848. His son, Wesley M., d. 1885, ae. 87 yrs. He had a bro., Carter, who served in the War of 1812, was a teacher by profession, and d. about 1818, unm. The former's sons were Milton C. and W. H. Abbott, who live in Neathery, Va. The latter has five sons, and the former one. The chil. of Benjamin Abbott, of Antrim Parish, Halifax Co., Va., mentioned in deeds, are Armestead and wife Frances, Jacob and wife Polly, Elizabeth and James. Elisha Abbott m. Lydia Clay, Oct. 1, 1793. The heirs mentioned in the settlement of his est. are as follows :

Wife Lydia, recd. 150 acs. of land, mansion-house and 9 slaves; dau. Elizabeth Hiel, 2 slaves (women) and a horse, saddle and bridle; dau. Nancy Carr, 2 slaves (man and woman); dau. Polly Martin, a slave woman and man and a horse, saddle and bridle; dau. Martha Cooley, a negro man and boy, a horse, saddle and bridle; dau. Sally Richardson, 2 negro girls, a horse, saddle and bridle; dau. Rebecca Dawson (?), 2 negro girls, a horse, saddle and bridle; dau. Annis, 2 negro girls, a horse, saddle and bridle; dau. Alice, 150 acs. of land, a negro woman and 3 chil. and a horse, saddle and bridle; son James, the balance of the land and his mother's dower at her d., a negro man and boy and a horse, saddle and bridle. The balance of the slaves at his wife's d. were given daus. Alice, Mary, Polly, Sally, Rebecca and Annis.

The will of Elizabeth Abbott, of Halifax Co., is dated May 22, 1836. Her bro. Moody was exr. and gave bond for $10,000. The will was prob. Feb. 26, 1838. She gave her est. with the exception of two negro girls which she gave to Elizabeth M. Abbott, to her sis. Martha Abbott.† The will of Martha (sister to foregoing) was prob. Aug. 26, 1844. Her bro. Moody declining the trust as exr., Wesley M. Abbott was aptd. admr., and gave a bond of $5,000. It was stipulated in the will that the est. was to be kept together during her bro. John's life, who was to take charge of it. After his d. it was to go to Elizabeth M. Abbott.‡

The will of William Abbott, of Halifax Co., Va., is dated Mar. 15, 1847. The heirs mentioned are wife Polly, daus. Elizabeth and Kitty Abbott, Ony Pincham, Susan Lindsay, and son Wesley W.§ Jesse Abbott is also mentioned in the early generations, from Joseph, the original settler. Others mentioned are Mary Abbott, who m.

Joseph Abbott, the original settler of the name, of Halifax Co., Va., was probably a son of Capt. John⁴ and Elizabeth (Phipps) Abbott, of Mass., Ct., and No. and So. Carolina, and was doubtless named for Capt. Abbott's cousin, Joseph, who was b. two yrs. after the Capt. and d. 1726, ae. 20 yrs., son of Dea. Nehemiah³ and Abigail (Lovejoy) Abbott, of Andover, Mass., who have a distinguished descent. Fifteen or more of the Halifax family and immediate descendants bear the given names of Thomas, William, Benjamin, Moody, John, Moses, Sarah, Mary, Elizabeth, Jesse, Jacob, Samuel, Solomon, etc., which are the names of Capt. Abbott's uncles, aunts, wife, and other near relatives.

The Abbotts in Spartanburg, Pickens and Oconee Counties, S. C., are also probably descendants of George Abbott of Rowley, Mass. The first settler in Spartanburg, SOLOMON ABBOTT, bought 125 acs. of land there Oct. 9, 1790, on the south side of Pacolet river, for £5.* There are records there of many other later purchases by him and by his descendants. The physical characteristics of his living descendants are so strikingly similar to those of George Abbott of Rowley, that while in the South, collecting data of their kin, strangers in some instances, especially in Atlanta where the descent is quite numerous and of local note, frequently asked the Compiler if he was there visiting his brothers. When called upon also by Benjamin F. Abbott, Esq., of Atlanta, in Wash., D. C., when this work was first begun, his first greeting as he advanced with extended hand was: "Oh! you are one of us!" and remarked that he had a bro. in Atlanta who looked near enough like the Compiler to be a twin bro.

Solomon's will, dated Apr. 24, 1854, was probated Nov. 30, 1857, and John Potter and James Turner are named as exrs. It provides that the testator's negro servant Proo and her five chil. should be sold to some humane man. Son Henry, and probably dau.-in-law, "Cynthia Dermet," having been given their share of their est., were willed nothing. The balance of the bequests were as follows: To gr.-dan. Louisa, probably dau. of son Norman and Cynthia Dermet (not stated whether surname or given name) Abbott, and Rymouth (prob. a dau. ?), wife of Albury Bishop, and my "club-footed (?) gr.-child, Van, dau. of Cynthia," $50 each; to "Elizabeth Soseby" (?); William Abbott; Agnes, wife of Joseph "Barestone" (?); the chil. of Eli Abbott; "Telletha" Adams; Sarah Spencer, wife of James, in trust to exrs. during her life, each $1,080.90, being one-sixth of testator's estate, the legatees probably being his children.

THOMAS ABBOTT of the Halifax Co., Va., tribe, had 16 chil., — 9 sons and 7 daus. His descent is very large and widely scattered, seemingly having inherited Capt. John⁴ Abbott's inclination to rove about. It is numerous throughout the Carolinas and other States, and especially in Pickens and Oconee Cos., where they were among the first settlers and where descendants are still living. Some in these lines of descent moved to Atlanta and elsewhere in Ga., and to Weatherford and other places in Texas, and are influential. Some of the Texas families are in the Cleveland Register, having m. into that family.

HON. "JO." ABBOTT, late M. C. from Hillsboro, Tex., states that his gr.-father's and gr.-gr.-father's name was William. It is possible that he, too, may be a descendant of Capt. Abbott, although he supposes that his Pioneer came from Eng. about the beginning of the Rev. War; but as Capt. John⁴ Abbott, according to tradition, sometimes made trips to Eng., such an impression might easily be gotten of both him and his sons, all probably being adults during and even before the Revolutionary period. At any rate it is evident, from what the ex-Congressman says about his Pioneer, that Rev. Henry Abbott, of Camden, N. C., was not his Pioneer; besides, the Compiler is not only as familiar with Henry's descent as old deeds, wills, etc., can make one, but with all other descendants known in Virginia and the Carolinas, of the early Pioneers of the family, and there is no other place for "Jo," the Edisto Island settler, who was probably an Irishman, and having living descendants in western So. Carolina located by the Compiler, although he is not sure of Walter's nationality. Physically, "Jo" Abbott is like the Rowley, Mass., and Halifax Co. Abbotts of Virginia. Much — all there is obtainable in S. C. — has been collected of the Halifax Co., Va., descendants and many other miscellaneous lines, as it was supposed the will of Capt. John⁴ Abbott would be found, and that it would give the names of his chil.; but it was probably lost or taken from the Camden, S. C., probate records, during or before the Civ. War. Possibly, too, this may be another instance of a descendant constituting himself the custodian of a public record, the result of which is that the will of an early settler has been lost as well as the names of the children, which is very disappointing to descendants. A law should be enacted making such an act a misdemeanor.

DANIEL and ELSEY ABBOTT were early settlers in Laurens Co., S. C. He was a carpenter and planter. His will dated Oct. 30, 1800, was probated Mar. 16, 1801, and his wid. Elsey was named as exr. His est. was valued at $2,852, including 8 negroes. He desired his est. kept together, except so much as might be needed to pay his debts, till his eldest child, Betsey, was of age, or as long as his wid. remained single. The est. consisting of a plantation of 850 acs., etc., on which he lived, was to be equally divided between the heirs when his chil. were of age or at m. He had soldiers' land grants in Penn. His wid. prob. soon m. a Mr. Vaughn, who belonged to an able, influential and wealthy family in the vicinity. The children mentioned in Daniel's will are sons Lewis M., William McDaniel Marsh, and James Smith, youngest son.*

THOMAS ABBOTT, who was possibly bro. of the foregoing, was surveyed a Royal Grant July 11, 1758, of a plantation of 150 acs. in Craven Co., S. C., at the High Hills between the waters of Black and Wateree Rivers, bounded on all sides by vacant land; † also Mar. 11, 1762, a plantation of 150 acs. in Craven Co. on Dry Swamp, near the High Hills, waters of the Wateree River, bounded on all sides by vacant land.‡ He is probably identical with the Thomas Abbott who was certified a Royal Grant of 315 acs. in Dist. No. 96, on the south of Saluda River on a branch of 23 mile creek waters of Savannah River, May 20, 1785, bounded N. E. by Jonathan Clark's, and on all other sides by vacant land.§ He had 3 chil. James, John and Elizabeth. James, a laborer of Anderson Co., S. C., sold his interest of 79 acs. in his father's plantation of 315 acs. to his bro. John, a house carpenter, Feb. 10, 1829, for $207,50.¶ The will of Margaret Abbott of Anderson District, wid. of Thomas, is dated Nov. 26, 1828, was probated Aug. 6, 1855, and dau. Elizabeth is named as exrx., to whom the entire est. was given. The only other heir mentioned is son John. Elizabeth's will dated Jan. 27, 1855, was prob. May 24, 1855, and James Mullikin is named as exr. She gave abt. 40 acs. of land formerly belonging to her father's plantation, to John Butler Abbott, of Pontotoc Co., Miss., 1857, son of her bro. James, decd. The balance of the est. consisting of money, notes, etc., was equally divided between James's other chil.: Thomas W., of Ouachita Co., Ark., 1855; John B.; Elijah, of Johnson Co., Tex., 1855; James; Jane E., who m. James W. Simons, and lived in Pontotoc Co., Miss., 1855; Franklin and Lucinda Margaret, the latter of Pontotoc Co., Miss., in 1857. John Abbott, son of Thomas and Margaret, d. unm. about 1853, and left a small est. to his sister, and bro. James's chil. The period of the first settler Thomas is too early for him to have been a son of Rev. Henry Abbott, of Camden, N. C.

DAVID (mariner) and KATHARINE ABBOTT are mentioned in the Charleston, S. C., recs., 1723. She was bequeathed £25 with which to buy mourning garments, by her bro.-in-law, Alexander Collins, of Berkeley Co., S. C., in his will dated Charleston, S. C., Aug. 1, 1723; no chil. are mentioned. If not a Pioneer, he was probably a descendant of Walter Abbott, Edisto Is., S. C. The period is too early for Capt. John¹ or Rev. Henry¹ Abbott's sons.

RICHARD¹ ABBOTT was b. in Tavistock, Eng., eldest bro. of Thomas, Esq., of Weymouth, Eng., who was living 1891. Richard¹ was connected with the Canadian Government "for years," but in what capacity is not known. He belonged to the Ch. of Eng.

His son Richard Edward² Abbott, was b. in Plympton, Can., June 10, 1842, and m. in Quebec, Can., Apr., 1864, Rose O'Neill, b. in Sorel, P. Q., Can., Mar. 16, 1839, who d. in Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 5, 1876. He d. there Feb. 5, 1885. He was also with the Canadian Gov. for a time, but a few years before his d. connected himself with the Lake Shore & Mich. So. Ry., and resd. at Grand Rapids and other places.

George A.² Abbott, bro. of R. E., is cashier of Hackly Natl. Bank, of Muskegon, Mich., and another bro., Charles J.,² resds. in Greenville, Mich. R. E.² Abbott had 7 chil. (3d gen.): 1. John S.³ Abbott, b. at Three Rivers, Mich., 1872; unm.

JOHN ABBOTT who was accidentally shot by Matthew Bridge, at Concord, Mass., 1636, was probably identical with John Abbott, ae. 16 yrs., who came in the "Hopewell," 1635, with Maria Abbott, ae. 16 yrs.*

EDMUND ABBOTT was admitted freeman in Taunton, Bristol Co., Mass., 1643.† He was enrolled with those between the ages of 16 and 60 yrs., as able to bear arms 1643.‡ The early town recs. having been destroyed by fire, there is no trace of his descendants. An Edmund Abbott, M. D., "Frankfort (?), Hancock Co." (probably Franklin, Hancock Co., Me.), was granted gd.-ship. of Alice Abbott, late Alice Ware, ae. 14 yrs., dau. of George Ware, decd., of Dighton, Bristol Co., Mass.§ This is the only early Abbott record in Taunton.

RICHARD ABBOTT although possibly identical with the one who came 1635, in the "Bonaventure," is first mentioned in the records at Portsmouth as having "subscribed" 10s. there, for the support of the minister, 1658. Old deeds mention two wives, Elizabeth, and wid. Mary Grafton; their maiden surnames are not known. He was granted by the town of Kittery, Me., 13 acs. of land June 13, 1659, in Crooked Lane, Kittery, which he afterwards sold to Walter Abbott, who gave it to his gr.-dau. Sarah Wills, with a house thereon, who gave it to her dau. Sarah Gere, and she deeded it jointly to her son Samuel, and son-in-law John Abbott, in equal parts, provided they would support and care for her in her old age.|| He was also granted by the town of Kittery 80 acs. of land Feb. 24, 1661/2; and 50 acs. Jan., 1673/4 (t. r.). He and his wife Elizabeth of Kittery, deeded 40 acs. of land there, on the Newgewnacke River near Port Wigwam, except certain pine timber land, Jan. 10, 1675/6, for £30, in "merchantable pine H., spinster," of Portsmouth, deeded 20 acs. of land she had owned for 50 yrs. to son, Caleb Grafton at Newcastle, for the benefit of another son, Stephen Grafton, Dec. 18. 1712.¶ There is no town or ch. rec. of any of his chil. if he had any, nor are any mentioned in old deeds in a way by which they can be identified. There is no rec. of a will by him, if any was made, nor anything to identify him as a bro. of Walter Abbott of Portsmouth, in case he was.

1. CAPT. SAMUEL¹ ABBOT, of Boston, Mass., commanded a packet-boat sailing between Boston and London, Eng., and was lost at sea about 1769. He m. Elizabeth⁴ Marston, b. in Marblehead, Mass., Aug. 15, 1725, dau. of Rev. James,³ b. in Marblehead, Dec. 27, 1691, and Sarah; gr.-dau. of James² and Elizabeth, and gr.-gr.-dau. of John¹ Marston, the English (?) emigrant mariner, of that part of Salem now Marblehead. Mrs. Abbot's first husband was John Sharon, and when she m. Capt. Abbot, was the wid. of John Wilkins, miller. Her bro. David and family resd. at the So. End, Boston. The family tradition is that Capt. Abbot was a kinsman of two bros., one of whom settled in Andover and the other in Salem, which indicates that he is a descendant of Arthur Abbott, of Salem and Ipswich, Mass.; but as the town, church and county records pertaining to the early settlers of old Salem are so incomplete, it is doubtful if the pedigree can be fully established. William Oliver, dry-goods merchant, of Boston, was trustee of Samuel Abbot's estate.

After Abbot's death his wid. moved from Boston to Concord, Mass., opposite the Common and tavern where the British stacked their arms on the morning of the battle of Lexington. The tavern-keeper's wife sought Mrs. Abbot's assistance in waiting on the soldiers at the tavern, being greatly alarmed at their presence. Later in the year Mrs. Abbot moved to Cambridge, Mass., where she lived opposite the Common about six months, and then resd. in Boston, but finally lived with her son, Samuel Abbot, at Leominster, Mass., till about 1781, when she d. while visiting John Wilkins, a son by her second husband, who lived in Cambridge, near Craigie's Bridge.

2. Capt. Abbot's son, Samuel,² was b. in Boston June 27, 1765, in a four-story brick house, Washington St., three doors south of the corner of Milk St., and opposite the Province House, then the Governor's residence. In the block of houses in front, under which, in subsequent years, the Province House was reached by an archway, he went to school for two years to Mr. Ames. Leaving school he lived about six months in Cambridge, Mass., when the family moved to the North End of Boston, near the North Ch., and then to Rose Lane. While here he was apprenticed, when about 13 years old, to Thomas Whittemore, cooper, whose shop was at the bottom of Atkinson St., near Thomas Russell's store, where he remained till of age; he then engaged in business as a cooper on East St., opposite Col. Hatch's house, where he remained four years. He then contracted to fill up the flats at Wheeler's Point, for Lloyd and Cotting, which took him three years, after which he built a wharf for James Lloyd on Sea St., of which Abbot was "wharfinger" till he settled on a farm in Leominster, 1827, when the wharf was sold to Mr. Hobbs.

He m. Naomi Cutting, of Roxbury, Mass., May 30, 1790, who d. in Boston, Nov. 23, 1805. He m. (2d), Aug. 2, 1806, Abigail, b. 1777, dau. of Paul and Christian (Turner) Spear, a descendant of the Plymouth Co., Mass., Spears. He was a mem. of the Leominster prudential com. 1830, and highway surveyor 1831. They both d. in Leominster (where their remains were intd.), she, June 29, 1852, and he, Oct. 15, 1856.* His will is dated Sept. 24, 1840, and Samuel L. Abbot, merchant, of Boston, is named as exr., but Hon. Charles F. Abbot, of Phila., was admr.; the estate inventoried May 16, 1857, for $4,187.92. The heirs named are wid. Abigail, daus. Naomi W. and Mary P., and Samuel L., decd., George W., decd., and Charles F. Abbot.

The estate was left in trust to Samuel L. and George W., to be invested at their discretion, the interest over and above expenses to be given semi-annually to the widow, and after her dec. to daus. Naomi W. and Mary P., in equal parts if unm., and to the survivor if living and single. If both d. or m., the est. was to be equally divided among the other chil. The heirs mentioned later on, probably when the est. was divided, are William Abbot, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Edward O. Abbot, of Norwich, Ct.; H. A. Abbot, of Beverly, N. J.; Hon. Charles F. Abbot of Abbotsford, Falls of the Schuylkill River, near Phila.; Naomi W. Abbot, of Leominster; Dr. Samuel L. Abbot, H. W. Abbot, and George W. Abbot, all of Boston; J. L. Abbot and Matilda C. (Abbot) Dexter, each of N. Y. City; Emily C. (Abbot) Furness, of "Terry Town," N. J.; Oliver S. Abbot, of Ill.; James Abbot, of Van Buren, Ky., and Charles Abbot, of Louisville, Ky. Another list of heirs is John C. Abbot, E. Kempton Abbot, and William Abbot, all of Norwich, Ct., and Henry A. Abbot, of Brockton, Mass.

ADDENDA, NO. 1.

THE RECONSTRUCTION PERIOD.

THE "Reconstruction period" in the South, especially in Texas, after the Civil War, was a unique chapter in Army life. Like following hostile Indians on the war-path, it required rare judgment, sagacity, energy, perseverance, willingness and determination. The officer who thought more of doing just enough to make an appearance of obeying orders — of keeping danger at a safe distance — rarely, if ever, accomplished his mission when sent on such duty; it was therefore the efficient commander who was generally selected for any important service of a like nature, and no regiment in those days had any too many of such men. Two or three of this class of officers, and often not as many, was the limit in most regiments, and it made the duty irksome and hard for such, when followed for many years, — and especially when one's reputation for success in such cases became known at Department and other headquarters, when they were often selected by Commanding Generals out of turn according to the Post Rosters, for obvious reasons, for scouting or other important detached service.

Still, when worn out with such duties because of unusual nervous strain on a system with possibly all its vital organs impaired from malignant diseases, wounds, etc., contracted in service, and perhaps on this account compelled to retire prematurely, it has largely been the less deserving, long active-service officers, with comparatively slight and unimportant Civil War and other services, who have been rewarded by exalted promotion on retirement. The continuance in active service of such officers has often been compulsory because of no disability; possibly due in most cases to a lack of those qualities which would lead to their selection for trying positions which would break down one's system, and cause early retirement. Such, as before stated, instead of the efficient, more deserving officers, with genuine Civil War and other service, have very generally been rewarded with distinguished promotion on and before retirement, probably because of a lack of understanding, or possible indifference, on the part of civic authorities in high places who do not have time to think, or who have been misled by comrades of long service who have received promotion, and not familiar with the facts in connection with their less fortunate comrades, unwittingly misrepresent them, on inquiry by the law-makers under the great white dome, on whose action merited reward depends.

The horrors of the Reconstruction period were about at their height in 1868-9, when Abbott (then 2d Lieut.) was ordered by Capt. A. R. Chaffee, 6th U. S. Cavalry (now—1905—Lieut.-General), at Pilot Grove, near Sherman, Texas, to proceed with less than a troop of cavalry, under the cover of night, and arrest some of the celebrated gang of bushwhackers, highwaymen and murderers, led by the widely notorious Bob Lee and Dr. Dickerstaff. These men were terrorizing the whole of northern Texas, and especially the Unionists and others who were favorable to accepting the results of the Civil War in good faith. Many of the latter had to leave their homes and families and hide in the woods and jungles for months at a time, to save their lives, while the bushwhackers hunted them like dangerous wild animals; if discovered, they were either shot on sight, or if caught, hung to the limb of some handy tree, after suffering all sorts of indignities to make them divulge such information as the bandits might think would be of use to them. Men innocent of any wrong-doing but friendly to the Government's plan of reconstruction, when attending church or other public gatherings on horseback—then the usual way of travelling in Texas—would be waylaid in the woods, jungles or other favorable places, and the head of a family unexpectedly shot down from cover, in cold blood and without warning, before his wife and children, some of whom might perhaps be mounted on the same horse with the bandit's victim. The atrocities inflicted upon this unfortunate class were fiendish, and betokened a depravity which would have disgraced the most abandoned criminal in the penitentiary. The terrible tragedies that occurred all through Texas, at that time the Botany Bay of the United States, will never be known, and if half were told, probably would not be believed; it is best they should not be fully related, as good people would lose faith in mankind, and the vicious be led to commit similar desperate acts, if suggested to them by recital.

It was during this shocking state of affairs that the Author received the order, on the night in question, to attempt the arrest of such as could be found of the worst gang of bandits that then, or probably ever, disgraced Texas. They were frequently harbored at the house of Mr. Marshall, a well-to-do planter, alleged to be virtually one of the gang, who lived about eighteen miles from Pilot Grove. Repeated attempts had been made by scouting parties to make the arrests, but without success. Abbott was strange to that neighborhood, having been previously stationed at Ft.

Richardson, near Jacksborough, Jack Co., Texas, on the extreme frontier, and was told by Sergeant Swift, a veteran of the garrison at Pilot Grove, who was one of Abbott's command on the expedition, of the various attempts by the military to capture or break up the gang.

The road, almost the entire distance to Marshall's house, was through one of the worst jungles ever seen, miles in extent every way. Tangled, thrifty brush bordered the way close up, except in occasional open spaces of about fifty yards, which made it very dangerous, and favorable for ambush on such a still, moonlight night, or at any other time. The old Sergeant's tale of woe pertaining to the settlers who sympathized with the Government's efforts to restore law and order in that locality, and the uselessness, as he thought, of the military to attempt to break up the gang of cut-throats, incited Abbott at least to endeavor to capture whatever of the gang might be at Marshall's that night.

On arriving at the eastern edge of the jungle, about 2 o'clock A. M., where the house could be plainly seen about a mile or more distant, on top of a goodly-sized hill on a rolling prairie, all canteens, etc., were ordered tied fast, to make no noise that would give notice of our presence. On approaching near enough, an attenuated skirmish line was commenced around the house and outbuildings, about a thousand yards distant, under the friendly north shadow of the hill on which the buildings stood, as the bright moonlight would expose us to view on the opposite side, if formed there first. Orders were given to close in on the buildings at daybreak at the sound of the trumpet charge, as rapidly as the horses could go, meantime arresting anyone attempting to escape, and if resistance were offered to resort to extreme measures and make the arrest, dead or alive. Even before the line had been wholly formed, two or more bandits were arrested who were trying to escape, as expected, through the line first formed in rear of the house to the north, where the ground was shaded and best suited for the attempt; they were sent to Abbott, and the first one (Beard) proved to be one of the most desperate characters of the gang. At daybreak the men, elated by their success, closed in on the buildings with a dash, old man Marshall being found hid under the hay in the barn, and no one, so far as known, escaped.

Abbott knew that the news of the arrests would fly like wildfire through the neighborhood, and that an attempt might be made by their friends to follow the command and release the prisoners. To prevent this, if possible, he told Mrs. Marshall, who was a sensible-looking woman, that if such an attempt were considered, and she wanted to save the lives of her husband and grown sons, to tell their friends that in case of an attack the prisoners would at once be shot, to save incumbrance or their possible escape, whatever might be the consequences, and that the command would protect itself at all hazards. This was firmly but as kindly and regretfully said as the circumstances would warrant. But this was diplomacy only. Helpless prisoners would not have been shot under any circumstances by Abbott's order. Diplomacy, therefore, was resorted to, to prevent the loss of lives in either party, which it doubtless did, and needs no defence.

There were also other women in the front door and yard of the house at the time of the arrests, all of course greatly excited. One of them being a visitor, told Abbott, when seen at her home some weeks later, that within a short time after he left Marshall's with the prisoners, there were many angry men there, some arriving during the day from Greenville, Black Rock, etc., many miles away, clamoring for vengeance and rescue; but Mrs. Marshall's entreaties, after telling them what Abbott had said to her, and her earnest pleading with them not to attempt either revenge or rescue — as she said she knew the officer meant what he said — were all that kept them in restraint. After a forced and most anxious march through the jungle, with an advanced and rear guard to prevent surprise, the prisoners were safely delivered at the military post at Pilot Grove, where some of them were ironed and all placed in confinement. These were the first arrests made of this gang, and it so pleased Gen. J. J. Reynolds, U. S. A., the District Commander, that Abbott and his men were officially thanked, in writing, by the General, for the service.

Shortly after this Abbott was ordered to raid Lee's house (which was in Marshall's neighborhood), in the daytime, hoping to surprise and capture Lee. But Abbott had no faith in such a project and acted accordingly; he knew Mrs. Lee, who was an estimable, intelligent, well-bred lady, with a family of little children, would be there, and the idea of unnecessarily terrifying them was repugnant in the extreme. He went there, quietly riding up to the house, and found her and her bright, pretty, inoffensive little ones living in hunger, destitution and in tears, in a log house which had been so often raided for Lee by the military that, notwithstanding it was cold weather, the chinking had been largely removed from between the logs — probably for defence in case of surprise: this, with its scanty furnishings, made it anything but inviting, and, much less a cozy home. After a kindly talk with Mrs. Lee he advised her to try and induce her husband to surrender peacefully, as in such a way his life would be spared: this, she said, she had repeatedly tried to get him to do. Finding that she was literally out of nearly all the necessaries of life as well as food for her little ones, Abbott, much affected, and with that peculiar lumpy throat sensation which prevents speech, and comes unbidden from sincere pity and emotion, went in silence to his mess chest and gave the weeping, unhappy woman and tearful, pitiful little children — a bright family, as both father and mother came from able parents — a large portion of his eatable supplies, knowing he could replenish them at the first ranch passed, and, at any rate, in the first town entered. The men, being silent witnesses and similarly affected, also divided their eatables with Mrs. Lee, living on half rations themselves. Thus these innocent sufferers were left forever by Abbott's party in comparative comfort, and at any rate, with the little ones' hunger appeased, none the worse for his visit.

Shortly after this the command was ordered to Sulphur Springs, Texas, which was probably the scene of more tragedies during and after the Civil War than any other place in the South. One tree in a group of three lone sentinels, which stood at a convenient distance on the prairie just outside of the town, which was a county seat, was pointed out to Abbott as the scene of a score or more executions of Union men by hanging, during and after the Civil War. An entire government supply-train of many wagons, loaded for some post further west, had been sacked and burned on the highway just on the western outskirts of the town, and the little garrison therein besieged by the bandits, so that relief had to be sent with all dispatch from Pilot Grove, even after the Civil War. Here, also, we were expected to make arrests of desperate characters; but the tactics of others who tried to follow Abbott's plan of assaulting houses at night not being as thoroughly carried out, did not prove so successful. His plan, however, had its effect, for it terrorized the whole gang of bandits throughout Northern Texas, and was the beginning of the end of local reconstruction lawlessness.

Soon after arriving at Sulphur Springs an order was received by Abbott to go to Pilot Grove and conduct the Marshall prisoners to the former place, where it was thought they would be more secure, the garrison there being larger. It was a three days' march via Greenville, the next county-seat west of Sulphur Springs. On the second day at about noon, as Abbott's command had emerged from a long stretch of many miles of jungle after leaving Greenville, and was approaching the first prairie divide about a mile from the jungle, who should appear in the road, just at the top of the divide a few hundred yards away, but the notorious bandit Bob Lee and one of his gang on horseback, probably en route for Greenville. No sooner had they sighted the command than they turned their horses so suddenly it threw them on their haunches high in the air, and off they dashed at their greatest speed on the back track across the treeless, rolling prairie, in an air-line, instead of following the crooked road, for the great jungle about Lee's home; but it was fully seven miles to cover, with Abbott's men at the start close behind. Ah, it was one of the gamest, most exciting races for life, as Lee supposed, ever seen. They were so well mounted, Lee on a powerful, magnificent gray horse, stolen some time before from the picket line at night, from Troop M of Abbott's regiment, that only two horses of his command — the fleetest being that of a civilian guide — could make any headway on the bandits; but these steadily gained on them until within about fifty yards of the woods just north of Marshall's place, when Lee's horse, all blown after so long a chase, fell exhausted, throwing his rider lightly on his feet: he ran down a sheltered ravine into the woods and jungle, where both bandits were lost. It was here a little later — too late — that the identity of both Lee and the horse which was captured, and ridden by Abbott many years after, were learned. The guide, who was a light-weight man and had the fleetest horse in the command — his personal property — was close enough to recognize Lee when in the ravine, and might have shot him, but being employed as a guide and therefore a non-combatant, and being native, he was not expected to do so, for it would have endangered his life when he should leave the government service, which he did soon after. But that race, in the bright sunlight of midday, over an open prairie, was the most exciting and exhilarating one the Author ever saw. There was no jockeying before or after the start: it was a race for life in dead earnest, which beggars description even by as gifted a writer as the late author of Ben Hur, or any one else.

This was otherwise an eventful trip, never to be forgotten. Returning a day or so later with the Marshall prisoners, Abbott took a road just a little south of where Lee escaped in the jungle, via Black Rock, Texas, also located in the midst of another dense jungle, a few miles away. On the second day, suspicious-acting men were occasionally noticed to the left, in the edge of the forest which paralleled the road for several miles, but not within rifle range, who were without doubt spies of the bandits. Abbott was met about noon by a venerable, kindly, alert, well-to-do old gentleman, to the manor born, splendidly mounted on a thorough-bred bay horse: he had fearlessly, at great risk, ridden out from the neighborhood of Black Rock, to warn Abbott that a gang of two score or more, partly inebriated bandits, double Abbott's command, were in hiding in the brush along the road, just beyond the town, about two miles away, with the expectation of ambushing his party, killing him and rescuing the prisoners. Even at this late day, it is not prudent to give this man's name, for his living relations might suffer annoyance from the extreme unreconstructed, of whom there may be some yet living in that neighborhood. This venerated man without doubt saved the lives of Abbott and others of his command, by directing him to an old abandoned road, which ran several miles to the north, around the jungle and town, on an open prairie, where the bandits would not risk their lives by a fair fight in the field.

It was, however, with genuine alarm and anxiety that Abbott parted with his benefactor, fearing that some of the bandits might have seen and recognized him, and, suspecting him of exactly what he had done, as soon as it was found they had lost their opportunity and prize, would kill him. He, however, seemed perfectly confident of his safety: but as Abbott insisted as a precaution that his benefactor continue on the road in the same direction he was going when met, so as if possible not to arouse suspicion, he did so. In case he did this, it was thought the bandits might give him the benefit of a doubt, and let him alone. But who ever heard of a better Samaritan? He, and the soldier sentinel who saved Abbott's life in the midnight Indian arrest in Arizona, mentioned later in this work, often come into the Author's grateful thoughts, and especially this unselfish, brave old gentleman of the old school, who had comparatively nothing to gain by his humane act except an easy conscience, but much to risk, for if found out, perhaps even if suspected, his life would be the forfeit. He was never seen or heard of afterwards by Abbott, nor had he ever before seen or heard of him. It was all so sudden there was no time to think of anything but quick action, and return sincere thanks.

Some time after this, Lee was shot and killed by a trumpeter of the famous Sixth Cavalry (Abbott's regiment), when unexpectedly met by a scouting party of soldiers who knew and were looking for him in a jungle near his home. This, with other conditions, virtually put an end to the lawlessness which had continued for several years after the Civil War, throughout Texas. Lee, or any of his gang, never committed another assassination from ambush, nor did they unlawfully execute or persecute any citizen after the arrests at Marshall's house, so far as known by the Author. It was a lesson that did them good, and was just what was needed by that community. They quickly learned to respect the authority of government troops, when sent to establish law and order.

ADDENDA, NO. 2.

THE INDIAN PROBLEM.

AT the height of the alleged mal-administration in the Indian branch of the Interior Department at many of the Agencies, Abbott was especially detailed by Gen. A. V. Kautz, U. S. A., commanding the Department of Arizona, by authority of the War Department, as Inspector of Indian supplies, and for other purposes, at the San Carlos Indian Agency, A. T., from June, 1877, to June, 1878; and being in a position antagonistic to the civil authorities, it was a most dangerous and trying one. He was the Army Pioneer in such work at this period. It was thought by high authorities, both in the Army and Interior Department, that if the Indians received all the supplies intended for them, it would stop to some extent the frequent Indian outbreaks and war-path tragedies in the Indian country west of the Mississippi River, which were so frequent after the Civil War. So far as this part of the programme was concerned, the wisdom of such a policy was so conclusively proven after a few months, that the sending of Army officers to other troublesome Agencies was decided upon, which finally resulted, for the time being, in the downfall of the demoralizing Agency Rings generally; but it took many years to demonstrate the wisdom of the Author's policy of commencing at the foundation, in order to civilize the Indians by sending all their children to school—industrial, agricultural, etc.—throughout the entire Indian country in the United States, and then, when graduated, create Reservation or other work for them as a means of civilization. The history of what has proved a thankless task for the Author, is unknown generally either to the Army or the public.

Time, however, has removed the confidential relations pertaining to Indian affairs of that day, existing between the Author and his various Department Commanders and others with whom he communicated directly, and the facts in the premises are now partially given to the public for the first time, for the sake of history, etc. The Author, against his own wishes, through that Agency which directeth all things, without knowing what his work would lead to, became the foremost actor at that time in the great Indian reform which lifted the Indians out of barbarism to a higher level and aspirations than the war-path, which, without any fault of theirs, had been their inheritance for untold generations. The opportunities he enjoyed while at the Agency, and afterwards, enable him to know and record the facts in the case better than anyone else living.

His oral and written recommendations to Department Commanders and others, in regard to Indian affairs during these eventful years, were very extended: only the most important of these, and other official communications, however, can be given here for want of space. From such as are presented it will be seen what a great lack of practical common-sense there was on the part of some,—not only as to the methods but as to the time of application of the same, for the civilization of the Indians.

When it was known that the most ferocious wild animals taken at a tender age, and even later, could be tamed and taught to do almost anything, it should have required no very great depth of thought on the part of any one, even if they did not know the history of Indian tribes already partially civilized, to see that Indian children could be placed at school, educated and approximately civilized, even in one generation and without "force." Accordingly, in a second appeal for suggestions on the subject of Indian civilization from the War Department, the Author fearlessly, but briefly, in order that it might be quickly and impressively read, recommended sending all the Indian children to school throughout the United States, the cost of which to the Government would probably be much less annually than the campaign expense alone of the army, in fighting to keep the Indians in subjection throughout the Indian country. The distinguished men concurring in part with the Author's views, in the series of communications published, were Lieut. Gen. P. H. Sheridan and Gen. O. B. Willcox, U. S. A. The Gerlach communication was referred to the foregoing for their views and also to Gens. I. McDowell, O. O. Howard, A. V. Kautz, W. H. French, U. S. A., Maj. R. H. Mezner, Capt. A. W. Corless, Capt. J. J. Van Horn, 8th U. S. Inf., Capt. J. B. Campbell, 4th U. S. Art., Capt. J. L. Viven, 12th U. S. Inf., and Lieut. L. A. Abbott, 6th U. S. Cav. The highly important and interesting statements selected for publications are as follows:—*

* Each officer expressed his own views on the suggestions of Lieut. Gerlach, without any knowledge of those of others.

“FORT FRED STEELE, WYO.,

“September 8th, 1878.

“Hon. G. W. McCRARY, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

“SIR: The recent recommendation of the Sioux Commission that the system of issuing to heads of families be further extended in place of issuing to tribes, etc., shows that it is considered advisable to disregard somewhat the tribal organization, or in other words, as I understand it, to organize Indian society on a basis more in conformity with our ideas of the modern State, with a view of finally making the Indian a citizen therein.

“I have always held such a policy to be the most humane, and the only one likely to bring to rest our Indian problem, without annihilating every Indian in the country. To bring the Indian at once from his state of nomadic or semi-nomadic existence to live under ordinary civil government, would of course never work, as the transition would be too great. After much thought upon the matter, however, in light of my experience while serving in Indian country, I do believe that the chances of success are fair for a system of governing our Reservation Indians, half civil, half military, resting authority in the head men of the tribe, associated with men appointed by the U. S. Government, with minor local authority delegated to sub-chiefs and heads of lodges. For executive force such a government should be dependent on a military force raised within the tribe, and a system of taxation in kind, by which every head of a lodge or family should contribute to a common store, which would furnish supplies in case of need, and give all an interest in the common welfare. Each family in consideration of aid now given them in various ways by the U. S., should be compelled to maintain one Indian soldier available at any time for service, either as police or as protection against attack from other tribes, or to serve in time of Indian war as auxiliary to the Army. Very little governmental machinery, and it of the simplest kind only, would be necessary, and gradually the Indian could be taught to submit to the restraint of law.

“Austria in her frontier districts, Russia in her Cossack Empire, have both shown us an excellent example how to civilize nomadic tribes, and how to make them an element of strength to the State. I have only given here an outline of ideas which have occupied my mind for years past, hoping that with your superior knowledge of public affairs you would consider them thoroughly. If you consider them worthy of notice, I shall gladly give them more in extenso, and I will willingly do what I am able, to mature a plan to carry them into practical execution.

“In conclusion, I beg that you will excuse the liberty I take in asking your personal attention direct to this. But I am naturally of a backward disposition, and while anxious to do what good I can, I detest any degree of notoriety.

“I am, General,

“Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

“WM. GERLACH, 2d Lieut. 3rd U. S. Infantry.”

“WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,

“WASHINGTON, Sept. 24, 1878.

“Official copy respectfully furnished for the information of Lieut.-General P. H. Sheridan, commanding Military Division of the Missouri, and inviting an expression of his views with regard to this subject.

“By order of the Secretary of War,

“E. D. TOWNSEND, Adjutant General.”

“HEADQRS. MIL. DIV., MO.,

“CHICAGO, Octo. 4, 1878.

“Respectfully returned. There is nothing new in this paper. The policy suggested therein has been followed for the last 22 years to my own knowledge. The first process in this Indian business has been to catch the Indians and put them on Reservations; the second step has been to destroy the tribal organizations, to subdivide them into families, giving them their own ground, and then into the individual condition of each one looking out for himself. This process takes a long time, having many impediments to be overcome. It could be more easily accomplished if more practical men were appointed for the management and more honesty was observed, and if there was better machinery in the Indian Department to deliver supplies.

“P. H. SHERIDAN, Lieut.-General.”

“HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE COLUMBIA,
“FORT VANCOUVER, W. T., Oct. 11th, 1878.

“To the Assistant Adjutant General, Military Division of the Pacific:

“SIR: Referring to a communication from Lieutenant Gerlach, 3d Infantry, addressed to the Hon. Secretary of War, suggesting a method of governing Indians, and referred to me for an expression of my views, I have the honor to make the following remarks:

“1st. As to the military part, the plan proposed is similar to an arrangement that I instituted among the Navajoes, raising a police force from the Navajoes to arrest criminals and recover stolen property. The system worked well until abolished.

“2d. The mixed government composed of white men and Indians would be dangerous, because white men near Indians are often, if not usually, either ignorant or bad.

“3rd. It would be as it has been for years exceedingly troublesome to have two systems of law, one for Indians and one for white men, in the same country.

“4th. Some Indians are civilized now, equal to having government and land like white men; some, half civilized, may be in just the condition for the proposed transition government; others wild, and wedded to governments of their fathers, and it would be difficult to get these to agree to, or enforce, the proposed system.

“I am, Sir, very respectfully,

“Your obedient servant,

“O. O. HOWARD, Brigadier General, commanding.”

“Presidio of San Francisco, Cal.

“SIR: A copy of the letter of Lieut. Gerlach to the Secretary of War having been referred to me ‘for an expression of my views’ on the subject, I am at a loss to know whether my views are to be limited to the suggestions of Lieut. Gerlach, or whether I am called upon to give my views generally on the management of Indians.

“In my annual report made last year as Commander of the Department of Arizona, I expressed my views on the present management of Indians rather freely and positively, in view of the fact that this management is claimed, and by law properly belongs to another branch of the public service; but into a consideration of it every Department Commander on the frontier is of necessity drawn, as in my particular case, and I felt fully justified in treating the subject as I did at the risk of being charged with assailing another branch of the public service. I have been informed that my report was made use of by my enemies and urged as a reason why I should be relieved from the command of the Dept. No reflection was made by the War Dept. on my management of that command, but as I was relieved without any apparent necessity or cause, I am forced to the conviction that my views as expressed in that report did not meet with the approval of the War Dept. My views as expressed in that report have not changed, and may be here reiterated in a single sentence,—that the only law which will bring about the civilization of Indians is the law of force. Even the success of this law will depend entirely on the wisdom, justice and honesty with which the law is administered. It should be directed to compulsory labor for the full-grown Indians and compulsory education for the youth. Unless compelled by fear or hunger, the Indian will never work. Unless compelled he will never learn to read or write, and until he acquires the English language or has his own tongue reduced to writing and printed, he never can make any progress in civilization. The degree of force necessary for different tribes will vary greatly, but without force no progress can be made.

“With regard to Lieut. Gerlach’s suggestions, there is nothing new in them. I can see no difference between his ‘half civil and half military’ system and the Indian Police which has been in use under the direction of the Indian Bureau. The annual reports of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs contain references and reports upon the efficiency of this police force in preserving order on the Reservations. The Agent at San Carlos, Arizona, claimed the greatest merit for the system, and within a certain limit it is undoubtedly very good. But when troubles of any magnitude occur the Indians cannot be relied upon. The situation at San Carlos was exceedingly favorable for experimenting with this police force; a number of tribes more or less hostile to each other were concentrated on this Reservation, and by using members of one tribe in watching another, they were made to keep each other in check. But what gave the greatest consistency to this police force, but which received no acknowledgment from the Agent, was the fact that the Reservation was surrounded with Military Posts, where Indian scouts were effectually used in hunting down renegades from the Reservation. In fact, Indian scouts were used as a police force by General Crook when he had charge of the Reservations, and it is possible that the use of Indian police was suggested by this use of Indian scouts. I believe, however, that Indians have been used more or less in times past for this purpose by Agents, although perhaps not until lately christened with a name and endowed with the functions of a police force. That this matter has received the attention of the Indian Department to an extent that looked to dispensing with soldiers in the control of Indians, appears from the enclosed copy of a circular that was sent to Indian Agents in 1875. The proposed details of the system of Lieut. Gerlach may vary from that used with Indian police, but the principle is the same. The plan of Lieut. Gerlach requires that the Indian should have reached a degree of civilization that would make it feasible, when the truth is that most of the Indians have not reached that state yet. It is easy to tell Indians what to do, but how are they to be made to do it? How is ‘each family to be compelled to maintain one Indian soldier?’ Small bands in districts populated by white people might be subjected to this plan with some hope of success, but large tribes, on the frontier, have no disposition to submit to the white man’s law unless compelled by a sufficient military force.

“No comparison can be made with the frontier tribes of Austria and Russia and our Indians. Ours is a savage race, whilst those of Russia and Austria are more or less civilized. Russia and Austria are monarchical governments, and can exercise an arbitrary power that is not possible in the United States, even through its army.

“I believe it entirely practicable to compel the Indians to a degree of civilization in a single generation, that would qualify them for citizenship.

“Respectfully submitted,

“AUGUST V. KATZ, Col. Sth Infantry, Commanding Post.”

" CAMP THOMAS, A. T., November 8, 1878.

" Respectfully returned to the Assistant Adjutant General, Dept. of Arizona, Prescott Barracks, A. T. I have no theory to advance in regard to the management of Indians. What is most needed at the head of each Agency is a man of good business qualifications, one who is patient and painstaking, and more than all one who is honest, firm and impartial. Such a man would be sufficiently competent, and would be apt to act as circumstances might demand, which in the successful management of Indians is indispensable. An honest administration at each Agency with the allowances now authorized, and a liberal distribution of agricultural implements and seeds to commence with, will do more towards settling the Indian question than anything else, and it seems useless to theorize until such a state of affairs is brought about, if at all. With the wilder tribes, of course it will require patience, perseverance, time and tact to get them interested in agricultural pursuits; but by bringing them in contact with tribes already inclined that way the first step will have been taken, and with honest dealing, protection, and even ordinary management, it is believed the result will be all that any reasonable person could expect. It is generally conceded that the Apache Indians of Arizona in years past have been the most warlike of any on the continent; but from my observation of most of the Apache tribes during the past eighteen months, I am satisfied if, after they were subdued by Gen. Crook, they had remained in the hands of honest men to guide and protect them, they would to-day as a whole have been fair agriculturists, and many of them would have been self-supporting. Even when deprived of a large portion of their allowances from various causes—which has been very generally the case—they are astonishingly patient, forbearing and tractable. The desire for improvement and pecuniary gain exists, but of course in a less degree than with their more fortunate white brethren; yet the germ is there, and all that is wanted for its development is practical help and protection, neither of which have they ever yet gotten, or, is it believed, will they ever get under the present system or management of Indian affairs.

" Very respectfully, your obt. servant,

" L. A. ABBOTT, 1st Lieut, 6th Cavalry, Commanding Post."

" H'QRS, DEPT. ARIZONA.

" PRESCOTT BARRACKS, NOV. 29, 1878.

" Respectfully returned, inviting attention to the remarks of the commanding officers Camps Mojave, Apache and Thomas.

" I concur with Lieutenant Gerlach that it is often advisable to disregard tribal organization, and to deal directly with the individual as with other subjects of the civil law. But as for any reorganization of Indian society under present divided management and control and frequent bad faith on the part of whites, I think a reorganization of white society in contact with or controlling the Indians would effect the most good, and I respectfully commend the views of Lieut. Abbott, 6th Cav., Comdg. Camp Thomas, near the San Carlos Reservation, as deserving of attention as practical. Some such plan as Lieut. Gerlach advocates for systematizing the internal administration of the Agencies would undoubtedly, if well carried out, prove highly beneficial.

" I am also in favor of incorporating the Indians into our military system, and recommend for this purpose reference to the Russian system with the Cossacks, and the British system in India.

" The four companies of Indian scouts in this department have proved to be a decided success.

“HQRS. MIL. DIV. OF THE PACIFIC AND DEPT. OF CALIFORNIA, “PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 20, 1879.

“To the Adjutant General, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.

“SIR: In compliance with the wishes of the Secretary of War, I now present my views in regard to the methods which it is possible and proper to adopt in governing and civilizing the Indians, though the opinions recently officially expressed by the Secretary and the General of the Army have caused me to hesitate in respect to adding anything thereto.

“The views of Lieutenant Gerlach, in relation to a subject as old as the nation, are in very general terms.

“To bring the Indians into a condition in conformity to our own, so as to make of them a better people, if not ultimately citizens, should be the aim of the Government.

“It is true its general policy, to effect a change in the character and manner of life of the savage nomadic Indians, which has prevailed till recent years, does not appear to have been adopted with much thoughtful consideration; on the contrary, till lately, the same policy has been pursued towards them as towards half-civilized Indians, — very much such a one as if these savage nomads were a poor, ignorant class of our own people.

“The success the early policy of the Government met with among the Cherokees, Creeks and other tribes located in the Indian Territory since 1838-40, — all Indians having permanent villages, and from the earliest times knowing enough of agriculture to cultivate crops of maize, — engrafted it firmly upon the Government; and the attempt has, up to a late date, been made to carry it out with other tribes, even the most nomadic and savage, without considering their previous habits and condition. Consequently the success in improving their condition has not been commensurate with the effort and its cost.

“Due consideration should have suggested that to civilize the savage nomadic Indian tribes, the first step must be to transform them into stock-raisers — without further effort to do more for them till they were successful in that.

“It might have been inferred that with the accumulation of property by the nomads in cattle and sheep, and the consciousness that they were sustaining themselves, would come the necessity of acquaintance with rude arts and mechanical trades. Then would come the demand for schools and religious instruction.

“As for the government of Indian communities on Reservations, the Indian Department, for some years, has on some Reservations employed an armed Indian police to maintain order and prevent Indians from leaving their Reservation without authority, and in arresting the criminals on it. The only government Indian communities can have on Reservations, while they are controlled by the Interior Department, must be such as that department can administer in conjunction with the nearest civil authorities and the power and authority of chiefs and headmen of Indian tribes.

“Certainly a military element therein is neither desirable nor necessary; nor may we look to what Russia and Austria, monarchical governments, have done with semi-civilized people of their own race, to determine what a Republican government should do with its savages of another race. Each country has its own problem to work out according to its own institutions and the character of races to be controlled by it.

“The system proposed of securing military service from Indians I do not consider necessary, nor if attempted do I think it will be successful.

“All our experience with Indian soldiers and scouts, from the settlement of this country, shows that their eagerness for and reliability in war is but for one engagement or campaign of a few months. For a short term of military duty they make excellent soldiers, in such desultory warfare as we carry on upon our roadless borders.

“When so employed they are entitled to payment for their services as now authorized. They should be engaged from time to time as needed, and discharged at the end of the campaign. This being not only the most economical plan for us, but the one best suited to them.

"Indians have one sentiment in common with the rest of mankind — the desire to acquire property. If the government will help the nomads, first, to get cattle and sheep, and will assist them long enough to realize therefrom not only subsistence, but, by the sale of its increase, the means to get other things, the question of civilizing them is settled. Very soon will come forward those who will cultivate small farms, others who will become mechanics, and practice the arts of curing and dressing skins and leather, and making coarse blankets for themselves and for sale.

"Herewith please find enclosed the views of Department Commanders and other officers of this Division, called upon by me to express their views upon the question presented.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"IRVIN McDOWELL, Major General, Comdg. Div. and Dept."

When the Gerlach letter was received by the Compiler, as it would take several years before the results of educating the Indian children would become effective, and as such a course was deemed impracticable without "force" by some, and was otherwise unpopular locally, it was supposed that a quicker method was wanted for restraining from the war-path if possible, without education, the uncivilized Indians: hence, the Compiler decided on his foregoing endorsement. The views of the Division, and of a past Department Commander, which did not accord with the Compiler's in any way, at first greatly handicapped him in his recommendations, for reasons which will be well understood by military men.

It is evident that the treatment suggested by him was along entirely different lines from those of some others, for he did not believe in "the law of force" * except when Indians were on the war-path, or in theorizing as to what could not be done to improve the Indians without first applying practical methods for results. With some of the eminent authorities consulted, force of habit in dealing with Indians had apparently placed them in a rut from which, with the exception of Gens. Sheridan and Willcox, they seemed incapable of extricating themselves. This is perhaps excusable, as they did not have the same advantages for studying the situation that the Author did. One thing is quite certain, however: the writers of some of the suggestions on Indian matters, made at that time, cannot be greatly commended either for rare good judgment and comprehensive thought, or a liberal, perfectly fair, unbiased, and earnest missionary spirit for elevating and improving an unfortunate race.

The embarrassment and responsibility of the trust seemed overwhelming, in the face of such eminent opposition to the methods for civilizing the Indians as then existed, and especially so when called upon to suggest such plans as would solve the Indian problem, where hundreds of thousands of souls other than the Indians were concerned; had it been known at the time that the Author's judgment was to be placed in general competition with such eminent authorities of greater age and experience, the situation would have been still more trying. Not only was such the case, as the communications will show, but the Author's suggestions were adopted and partly carried out, as soon as practicable, instead of theirs, for which neither the Commissioner of Indian Affairs of that day, Hon. E. A. Hayt — a man of earnest, sterling sense — nor the Interior Department has ever received due credit.

The idea of some of those in military authority at that time was to allot the Indians land in severalty, compelling them to live on it, work it, etc., and make them all citizens at once. This, Abbott opposed on the ground of unfitness, and of repeating the colossal mistake of the Government in admitting the whole colored race to rights of citizenship after the Civil War. His ideas were to establish Reservation schools for children too young to be separated from their parents, and others for the larger children, with industrial and domestic branches attached, in populous centres, away from the demoralizing tribal and frontier influences, and as fast as they were graduated to allot lands in severalty to them, and to such others of the adult males at any time as were worthy, placing them under the tuition of competent white farmers to learn the art of farming, stock-breeding, etc., according to conditions, gradually decreasing the Government ration as warranted, and then admit them as freemen to all the rights of citizenship under the Constitution, according as they showed themselves law-abiding and capable of self-support. This, as the Indians are imitative, and the better class of them ambitious to emulate the whites, would serve as an incentive for a large majority to become citizens, and would virtually settle the Indian question for all time.

The Author's plan to assign farms, etc., to adult Indians after returning from school, — thus treating them individually, not tribally, — was probably at first, if not for a long time, disregarded. It is doubtful however, if it was known by those in authority, so many years after, when the first graduates returned from school, owing to the changes meantime in Government officials interested, due to changes in National administration. The folly of returning to idleness and the demoralizing influences of tribal and frontier surroundings, a lot of young Indians, after years of mental training at school, surrounded by civilizing influences in the midst of populous centres, is too obvious for comment. Lately (1903-4), however, since hints were given to the Commissioner, by the Author, when applying for certain information in regard to this matter, more attention has been paid to this part of the scheme for civilizing the Indians.

It was never for a moment expected that, by education or anything else, an Indian could be made the equal of an Anglo-Saxon in a single generation, if indeed ever; but it was believed that in time the race could be improved enough to elevate it to higher aspirations than the war-path, if not to become self-supporting, good citizens as a whole, like other partially civilized tribes, which was worth the trial. When the Author found an opportunity to make any practical suggestions on the subject where they would be respected and do any good, he did so, and fortunately the authorities in Washington apparently saw fit to adopt them instead of following in the old ruts of others who were many years behind the times on the Indian question, and doing nothing practical. The views of the latter were doubtless based on their frontier experiences before the Civil War. when, as lieutenants, they came immediately in contact with Indians not as far advanced as in 1877, and are misleading.

As a matter of fact, there were several of the Apache and other tribes in the United States at that time (1877), where the males not only farmed in a small way, but were anxious and willing to do so, and, when tactfully encouraged, were not only greatly interested but quite enterprising. Some of them worked as day laborers for white men and others, when opportunity offered. Even the wildest tribes on the San Carlos Reservation, in emulation of others more progressive, were more or less interested in building long, quite formidable ditches, to irrigate their cultivated patches, and the great rivalry and interest displayed by them was a study. In such tribes, everyone, men, women and children, turned out day after day to build these ditches, some of them a mile or more in length. — no small undertaking. — and when ready, cultivated their little fields as best they could with the means they had at hand. They also showed an interest in stock-raising. Instead of killing their cattle when issued on the hoof, they would keep them and kill wild game to live on, or go without. All they needed was practical help, fair treatment, and an earnest, painstaking, honest, persevering, tactful, practical man of common sense to keep them balanced.

From facts like these, and his observations of what the Catholics, especially the Jesuits, and other Church societies had done in educating and christianizing the Indians at an early day, the Author saw that if the children were sent to school, mentally trained till adult age, and given half a chance, the generation so treated would not only have self-control, but would settle down at least to higher aims than the war-path, and that in time most of them would be able to care for themselves with practical help from the Government to begin with. The same is equally true in some instances even now, where the Indians have not been properly handled, the statements of others to the contrary notwithstanding, — if there are those who have fallen into a rut and are not enterprising enough or have not the good sense to get out of it.

The trouble is, shallow, so-called experts on Indian matters are not satisfied with slow progress from generation to generation: they expect too much at first, and cite with much gusto an occasional degenerate act of an educated Indian, as proof that all are incorrigible. They forget that even an Anglo-Saxon child, with civilized parents almost from the beginning, has to go through many years of school and other discipline before he is fitted for life's work, and that even some of these degenerate to a deplorable level before the journey of life is finished. In civic as well as in all other matters, "whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." The Indians needed guidance and help to lift them to a higher level: they were the wards of the Government: it was its God-given duty to elevate them to a higher plane by education, and the Author having been specially selected from all the commissioned officers of the Department of Arizona, and so informed by a staff officer at the time, to represent the Government in the matter of their improvement, conscientiously acted accordingly.

The second call from Washington for help was a circular letter to all officers of the army with any considerable Indian experience, calling for their opinion as to the best means to be pursued to civilize the Indians. Owing to the congested state or want of room for the orderly, systematic storage of public documents in the War Department, after a search of "five hours" by the file clerk in 1901, the document could not be found; this is greatly regretted, as it would make interesting history and help to substantiate this statement.* When the letter reached the Author there were scores of endorsements, but he was the first one to recommend the general sending to school and education of all the Indian children throughout the Indian country in the United States, which was done so far and as

* Since the history of this matter was written and sent to the printer for this volume, an officer of the Civil and Spanish-American War, a Colonel of Militia and a War Department clerk of high standing for many years, has stated to the Compiler that it is his belief that the communication in question, with the Compiler's endorsement thereon, has been purposely made away with, by some interested party. If so, whatever may have been the motive, the originator of this plan to settle the Indian question would never have been historically known except for the account here printed: this, of course, could not have been anticipated, for the publication of this work had then not even been contemplated. The Compiler has also been informed, whether true or not, that an officer who wrote an order on the field during one of the great battles of the Civil War in connection with a successful and highly important movement, in order to verify his statement and correct false history, etc., when his word for it was disputed after the war, examined his order book, which was in the War Department with other records, and found the leaf containing the order, together with others, had been torn out. He was thus unable to prove by the records that credit had been given to the wrong officer for the origin of the movement. So it is apparent that such a thing as destroying an important War Department record has occurred before, and such may be the case regarding the Compiler's recommendation to educate all the Indian children.

So much intrigue, in order to nullify his recommendations, attended the Author's efforts in 1877-78 to do anything for the Indians, and as the document containing his recommendation to send all the Indian children in the United States to school cannot now be found, after mature deliberation he has concluded, in view of all the circumstances, to make affidavit to the facts, in order to convince the most skeptical of the truth of his statement. It is as much of a mystery to the Author as to anyone what has become of the document, in case it is not among the War Department records. From what he was told by an A. A. G., however, about 1901, when the document was first looked for, he is of the opinion that if persistent search was made for it, and all records of that period were examined, it could be found, if not destroyed. The following is a copy of the Author's affidavit:

" Personally appeared before me, a Notary Public, Maj. L. A. Abbott, U. S. A., who states that while in command of Camp Thomas, and Indian Inspector of beef cattle at the San Carlos Indian Agency, A. T., about the fall or the fore part of the winter of 1878-79, a circular communication was received by him originating from the War Department, inviting army officers with extended Indian experience to suggest what in their opinion would be the best methods for civilizing and improving the Indians, or to that effect; that when the communication reached him there were scores of endorsements, but no officer had recommended sending the Indian children to school; but that he did, and was the first one to do so in reply to the communication, which was the first and only one ever sent of its kind, known to deponent, to army officers. Deponent further states that as Congress doubled its appropriation for Indian schools at its next session afterwards, and the Government commenced to establish Indian Reservation schools, including one at the San Carlos Indian Agency, and other Indian schools in populous centres away from the soon as practicable by the Interior Department, and as a result, in less than a score of years after, Indian wars had virtually ceased, as predicted by the Author.

In the meantime new men have very generally taken the places of those who started the good work of civilizing the Indians, both in the army and the Interior Department, and the general plan to carry it to successful completion, without friction, seems to have been partially forgotten. So that even now the Indian question is much mixed; from occasional press reports some of the Indians are, from time to time, apparently on the verge of open revolt because of a lack of tactful management, through apparent lack of knowledge in Washington on the part of those whose business it is to place the matter under an interested, practical, firm, honest and kindly guiding spirit at the Agencies, to lead the Indians unsuspectingly and unassumingly onward and upward out of their darkness, and see that it is done. The Indian character is such that arbitrary military measures will never civilize, though they may undoubtedly control him. Tactful leadership, education, honesty and kindness will make the Indians good citizens sooner than any other methods and with less friction.

The general public is aware of the fact that Indian wars are probably practically settled forever, in case the Indians are properly managed; but how this was accomplished, or the dangers and annoyances encountered by the medium who first confronted the deplorable condition at the Agencies, and did his thankless part under most trying circumstances to help bring it about, will never be fully known. The result, however, forcibly illustrates the old adage that "the pen is mightier than the sword;" but in this instance it was the latter which made the pen authority, at that time, on the Indian question. This is a fact, not historically known, and probably never will be otherwise than as here recorded, since some of those who saw the force of the Author's suggestions, and probably acted on them, have long been dead. Probably Abbott's endorsement to educate the Indian children will crumble and rot with age among the Department files at Washington, if preserved. But it is believed that if the Indian question had been thus handled years before, the dangers of frontier life would have been greatly lessened, millions of dollars would have been saved to the public treasury, and thousands of horrible war-path tragedies would have been averted.*

Reservations, the supposition is that it was done on account of his endorsement, which was probably concurred in by other army officers. Deponent further states that after having made four applications to the War Department authorities and two to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for the document in question, in order to learn its full history, he has been unable to obtain it, on the ground that it cannot be found.

Such reforms are rarely brought about without friction. Some of the profession disapproved unofficially of the Author's recommendations, on the ground of self-interest. But this was weakness, and treated accordingly. Nevertheless, he who acts with unreserved, conscientious good judgment in important public reforms, rarely escapes unkind criticism and unjust abuse, nor has the Compiler.

In order to get its full history, a second attempt was made in 1904 to find the circular letter of 1878, from the War Department, sent to experts in the army calling for suggestions as to what would be the best methods to improve the Indians, but it again proved fruitless. For his own satisfaction the Author examined quite extensively the various annual reports of the Commissioners of Indian Affairs for nearly a century past, in order to study the educational side of the Indian question, etc. This extensive research of these interesting but unnecessarily voluminous and in early years confusing reports now enables him to give a brief statement, with conclusive proofs, that it was due to his recommendations in 1877-78, for the improvement of the Indians, of many of which he has retained no written record, that a system for educating them was adopted, which in less than fifteen years resulted in stopping them from going on the war-path. This was the most important period in the history of a race which has been the most pitiable and unfortunate on the continent, because of its helplessness to rise of itself to a higher life.

From that period the present (1903) Commissioner, Hon. W. A. Jones, whose report for 1902 is one of the most complete and useful ever made, and who is apparently the right man in the right place, begins an epoch in Indian history, as can be seen by reference to the two tabulated statements which follow further on. The Author's part in connection with this period was, so far as he is aware, unknown to Mr. Jones, but when the subject is more fully treated, the work of the Author which led to results enabling the Commissioner to begin his tabulated statements in 1877 better than at any other time, will be more fully understood. Up to that period the funds for Indian education had been largely derived from the Church, Indian treaties and Government annuities, — some commencing almost as far back as the Republic itself, — Indian contributions, etc. At the close of the Civil War very little progress had been made in educating over a hundred thousand war-path Indians, who greatly menaced the westward advance of civilization. What few schools there were, had been managed almost wholly by the Church, and were largely confined to the tractable, partially civilized Indians, widely scattered throughout the United States.

on account of the Indians. Of this amount, $845,275,290 was spent on account of Indian wars and for controlling rebellious tribes, while $240,000,000 went for Indian education. "Heretofore," says the Commissioner, "the dealing has been with the tribe; it is now with the individual." (Just what the Author recommended in 1877.) "His manhood is appealed to, and he is to be taught self-reliance and self-respect, and to put his hand to the plow if he would work. As a first result over 12,000 have been drafted from the ration roll, being wholly self-supporting."

When the Gerlach letter came to the Author he labored under the same doubt as to what was wanted as Gen. Kautz. As there was so much opposition to educating the Indian children locally, and as many thought it could only be done by "force,"* no mention was made of his proposed plan in the Author's endorsement. A few weeks later, when the letter from the War Department was received, asking definitely what in the opinion of army experts would be the best thing to do to civilize the Indians, the issue was squarely met, officially, and the Author recommended that all Indian children be educated, etc., which he had always believed the true way to accomplish the end desired. The semi-official agitation of the question between the author and others for the year previous (1877), apparently, however, bore fruit, the Commissioner, — characteristically of that office in that day, taking all credit to itself — aptly commenced to carry out the educational part of the plan in 1878, which had been recommended by the Author; though it may be possible that his suggestion (1877-78), which was probably concurred in by other army officers, was sent direct by the War Department to the Committees of Congress (1878) which controlled Indian legislation, for its information.

By the report of the Commissioner of Education, 1878, pp. 282-3, it will also be seen that, in that year Lieut. (now Brig. Gen.) R. H. Pratt, U. S. A., either under or by direction of the War Department and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, proceeded to carry similar plans into execution so far as non-resident boarding schools were concerned, in accordance with Abbott's suggestions of the previous year.

In 1879 Pratt started the celebrated Indian school at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.: there are now twenty-five or more such schools in different localities throughout the country. This was a part of Abbott's plan, whether Pratt knew of it or not. The Author had little faith, although it is claimed by the late Commissioner Jones that Pratt did have, that any considerable number of graduates from boarding schools away from the Reservations would settle down in the neighborhood of such schools, or anywhere in the East. It would be contrary to filial and all other ties existing in families or races, and especially in the Indian race. Hence Abbott recommended that when male graduates returned home from school they be assigned farms, etc., for obvious reasons, as heretofore stated.

According to the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, 1902, p. 42, the following table gives a summary of Indian schools and attendance from 1877 to 1903 inclusive.

Some of the figures in this table were taken from Reports of the Superintendent of Indian Schools as printed prior to 1896. As revised, the statistics are all taken from the Reports of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

The foregoing table shows a yearly increase of "about 1,000 pupils." "The possible enrollment of Indian pupils, based upon the population statistics, is about 35,000 children. The present enrollment in all schools is 28,610, which leaves, assuming the possible enrollment given above as approximately correct, about 6,390 as now not at school." (Report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, p. 42.)

The following table shows the annual appropriations for Indian schools for 27 years, made by the Government, from and including the fiscal year 1877 to 1903. (Ibid., p. 50.)

* Indian children attending public schools are included in the average attendance, but the schools are not included in the number of schools." (Ibid., p. 42.)

† A Reservation school was established at the San Carlos Indian Agency, A. T., 1880.

‡ Prior to 1882 the figures include the New York schools of which there were about twenty-three.

An analysis of the foregoing appropriation table which no one living can make more understandingly than Abbott, shows, also, that an epoch of civilization in Indian history did actually commence in 1877, the year he was specially sent to the San Carlos Agency to see if anything could be done to improve the Indians. He was informed by Gen. Kautz, then commanding the Department of Arizona, as well as others in authority, among other things, that the War and Interior Departments were working in unison with a view to improve if possible the condition of the Indians, and that the Author was expected to study the Indian problem generally, and make suggestions accordingly, both to them and the Commissioner if desired.

The Author was greatly burdened with autograph letters, which were probably never seen by anyone except the writers and himself, as long as Gen. Kautz remained in command of the Department, and after, all of which were destroyed, and some at once (as the Compiler always conscientiously protected his commanding officer so far as he could), to keep them from falling into the hands of Gen. Kautz's enemies especially, in case anything happened to the Author, since much friction had previously existed between Kautz and the Agency authorities, and the Author's life during the year he was at the Agency alone, unprotected by troops, was at first greatly endangered, so bitter was the feeling against him by some of the employes, who regarded him as a detective. It is known that one attempted midnight assassination was prevented only by discretion and presence of mind on the part of Abbott. There is no room for its exciting, dramatic recital here; but it was thus that the epoch of Indian history, 1877, and especially that of the war-path Indians whose periodical tragedies and atrocities had shocked the civilized world for centuries, had its birth, — education having raised them to a higher level than their former aspirations. It will be seen from the foregoing annual table that the government appropriation, 1877, for Indian schools was $20,000: that it was increased to $30,000, 1878; and the year following (1879) the Author's recommendation — which was as soon as Congress could act — that all Indian children be sent to school, it was increased to $60,000, or double that of the previous year: that it was again increased to $75,000 each, for 1880–81, which finished the experimental period of sending Indian children to the Hampton, Va., and other schools, in order to see if Abbott's recommendation would work practically — which to an expert in early Indian education and its results seems unnecessary, and like so much lost time. The following year, 1882, it was increased to $135,000, and in 1883 to $487,200. After this it went on grandly increasing from year to year, till at the end of the decade, 1887, it was $1,211,415 for that year; at the end of 20 years (1897) $2,517,265 for that year; and finally for the year 1903 the splendid sum of $3,531,220 was appropriated, which brings it down to date, the per capita expense per year per enrollment being about $123, while the per capita expense of Philippine children at school in California, according to press reports, has been about $500.

Can anyone be so obtuse after this exposé, as not to see what has settled the Indian question for all time? Has it not been largely education? Could it be possible that an average attendance at school of 25,432 Indian children as in 1903, out of a total of about 250,864 Indians all told, would have no civilizing effect? And yet the Author has been told by intelligent men not familiar with the facts now, or regarding the civilized tribes of the Indian Territory, that doubtless the encroachment of the frontier settlers in the Indian country has brought about the change, forgetting or else not knowing that now, as ever in the past, owing to the nature of the country, many Indians live far remote, and especially in the arid regions, from any considerable number of settlers, and that in such localities raids by Indians are quite as practicable now as ever, had not education elevated them to a higher level; and that such was especially the case fifteen years since, or when these raids first ceased; thus showing that when one is not an expert in any matter it is better to be silent, and not create mischief by unwittingly misleading others.

In this most important matter the Author claims to have been only a factor — though a very important one — in helping to bring about this most satisfactory condition in the status of the Indians in this day. It would however, be most interesting to know, after such letters as have been published, what army officers concurred in his recommendation to educate all the Indian children: for without doubt the Author's endorsement and other concurring ones on the circular letter before mentioned were the principal cause of doubling the appropriation for Indian education at the next session of Congress after the letter was sent out: for why should it have been sent without some such use of it was to be made? It contained the opinions of most of the experts in the U. S. army; it is therefore, reasonable to suppose that the most practical suggestions would be used by the War Department, to aid the Indian Bureau and Congress in considering the Indian question. It is the Author's understanding also, from what he was told by Gen. Kautz and others in 1877, that this was its purpose. It must further be remembered, that previous to 1877, the Commissioners had been unable on their own representations to get regular appropriations from Congress, from year to year, sufficient to carry on successfully the work of Indian education. — probably because that branch of the Government service was in bad standing in that day owing to the corruption at Indian Agencies, etc. It is but reasonable to suppose that when an army expert — accustomed for years to almost daily contact with Indians, and specially selected by the Government to go to an Agency for months, to make a study of the Indian question, etc., — recommended that all their children be sent to school as a sure means of civilization, some attention would be paid to his recommendation.

Notwithstanding Commissioner Hayt, who in some ways was an excellent official, does not so far as known, once mention the Compiler in his annual report, he did send him a letter apologizing for the treatment accorded him by the Agency employes at San Carlos in 1877-78. It is a failing with most Commissioners, however, as can be seen from their annual reports, to give no credit to their subordinates or others when it is due, by mentioning names. If anything one does or recommends is of sufficient consequence to be acted upon or used in official statements, especially in important matters, — about the most pleasing thing in life is to receive credit for it by name, and in army official life the custom of giving such credit is very generally observed. It is ingratitude not to do so, and a grievous disappointment to the one neglected. However, if the Author had not been so imprudent as to have been several times shot while leading his men in battle in the Civil War, and so badly wounded as to necessitate his retirement in 1885, he would have been compelled like many others — some of whom possibly never smelled powder in battle — to have remained on active duty, and just from sheer length of service (providing the fortunes of war had not served him better in the estimation of some), have been fortunate enough to have been promoted to distinguished rank, and retired by constitutional limitation in the eve of life, in these palmy days for veterans of the great Civil War who happen to be on the active army list, however insignificant their services in that war may have been.

If the reader has any doubt as to the deplorable state the civilization of the Indians was in, in 1878, he has but carefully to read in connection with this exposé, the foregoing letters of Lieut. Gerlach, Gens. Kautz, McDowell, and others eminent in the Army, published in this work, to satisfy himself. The need of some one with enough of comprehensive thought to bring order and system out of chaos must seemingly be apparent to the most obtuse. Even the most eminent men in the Army had no definite plan to offer, or if they had, it was not suggested in a way to be helpful, or to make it practicable to be carried out by those whose business it was to try to improve the condition of the Indians. In fact the Author knows from personal contact with several of the eminent men who consulted him on the subject, that they were helpless in the premises to such an extent as to make it exceedingly irksome; he could not see how any one could be so obtuse as not to discern that there was no other way to settle the Indian question except by education, and hence he asked to be relieved from the Agency, feeling that it would do no good to suggest that the Indian children be all sent to school, as neither Kautz, his past Department, or McDowell, his Division commander, approved of it, as can be seen from their letters accompanying this report. Later, however, the War Department asked for Abbott's views on the subject, and he then recommended, as heretofore stated, that all the Indian children in the United States be sent to school, for he could see no other sure way of accomplishing what was desired. This as soon as practicable has been done from year to year, and now (1905) some 29,000 or more, of about 35,000 Indian children all told, are receiving the benefits of education both industrial and otherwise; it has settled forever the question of the Indians going on the war-path again, and has put them on the road to a still higher civilization. In this connection the reader is invited to study carefully the two tabulated reports above; even a casual glance tells the story.

In view of the extremely radical stand taken by Gens. Kautz and McDowell, and especially by the former, which Abbott had to contend against,—that the Indian children could not be schooled except by force of arms, or to that effect,—the fact that they have been, and on Abbott's recommendation, in the face of such discouraging letters, is highly satisfactory. He regrets that those officers did not live long enough to find that their judgment in the matter was not infallible, for the positive ground taken by both was irksome as well as amazing to a practical man.

During the Civil War Abbott commanded men and fought them in thirty-five or more battles for the preservation of the Union, and for emancipation, thus helping to relieve from bondage about 4,000,000 slaves; he was four times wounded; he served eighteen years in Indian warfare to protect frontier settlers, but is better content in knowing that he led the way which settled the Indian question eternally, and raised the Indians, another unfortunate race, to a higher level of civilization, than he would be to receive the highest rank in the Army without it could be dignified by some such act. If every small fight in the Civil and Indian wars in which he has been engaged was recorded in his behalf, as claimed by many Army veterans, the battles to his credit would be numbered by scores. He has loved justice, therefore; to aid the helpless and unfortunate he has borne conflict and labor, plot and biting scorn, believing that in the course of time all mankind will become perfect, and that to help others rightly, with this object in view, should be one of the chief aims in life.

Shortly after leaving San Carlos in 1878, the Department Commander, being dissatisfied with the administration of affairs at Ft. Thomas, A. T., directed Abbott to leave Ft. Grant and assume command at Ft. Thomas, at that time an important post of two and most of the time of four companies, including transients, on the edge of the Indian Reservation, where he was to remain pending promotion as Captain, which would carry him to a troop on duty at that post, and where he did remain several months in command, notwithstanding there were field officers eligible for this duty. It was at this time he was unwittingly robbed of his rightful promotion by politicians at Washington, by having an officer previously dismissed from a colored cavalry regiment, who had been reinstated by Congress, assigned to fill the vacancy of Captain in the 6th Cav., which by military custom belonged to Abbott. Lineal promotion then being regimental, a reinstated officer had always before been assigned to the regiment from which he had been dismissed, for obvious reasons. This rank injustice was a hardship difficult to be reconciled to after so many years of faithful, hard service, and on account of loss of files which would affect his future promotion and the loss of difference in salary. However, he was promoted Captain of Troop K, 6th U. S. Cavalry, in 1880, and commanded it at Fort Verde, A. T., from July, 1880, to March, 1881, when he was granted a year's sick leave of absence.

While at Fort Verde in the fall of 1880, he was especially detailed by the Department Commander — after the Post Commander, with whom such details were usually discretionary, had designated, according to the roster for scouting, another Captain for the duty — to proceed with his troop and arrest several turbulent Apache Indians, including the Chief, Little Captain, a defiant, troublesome savage. For the performance of this duty under extremely dangerous and trying circumstances, the Indians outnumbering Abbott's command five to one, and being in an ugly spirit, he received special mention and commendation in the annual report of Gen. O. B. Willcox, U. S. A., commanding the Department, to the Honorable Secretary of War, but no promotion such as was later given another in the Philippines for similar service in the arrest of Aguinaldo.

Like Aguinaldo, Little Captain secreted himself with some of his followers in the hills among the rocks, in an unfrequented out-of-the-way stronghold, and his midnight arrest, which was strictly in accordance with manly rules of war, was even more dramatic. He was placed in irons as directed by the Department Commander, and afterwards tried and sentenced to the penitentiary at Yuma, Cal., where a year or so later he made a sensational escape. Abbott not being a politician, however, endangering the prospects of others for political preferment, but only a plain, every-day hard-worked old soldier, on whom responsible, important and dangerous duty in the Department largely fell, was not heralded to the world through the press as a hero, nor was he promoted Brigadier General.

When about to iron Little Captain, after his surrender, a little past midnight, when it was supposed all danger had passed, one of his relatives, with his blanket completely enveloping his body from his shoulders to the ground, thus hiding the concealed weapons he carried on his person, adroitly and noiselessly crept up unseen behind Abbott, who was sitting on the end of a log running to his rear; on this the Indian slyly seated himself close behind, with evil intent. The first warning of danger was the loud, shrill, profane challenge, which was startling as it rang ominously out on the still midnight air, "— — you, get away from there!" from the vigilant old soldier sentinel, stationed three or four paces away across the guard's camp-fire, for the purpose of shooting to kill, as the balance of the command were told to do, in case any violence was attempted when Little Captain was placed in irons. The tone was so excitingly loud and full of anxious alarm, all eyes were instantly turned on the sentry to learn the cause. On glancing up, Abbott discovered that the sentinel's carbine, which was cocked and loaded, was apparently levelled directly at his head, being directly in front, but was really aimed past it, over his shoulder, at the head of his would-be Indian assassin. On impulse Abbott sprang aside, which revealed the assassin, a picture of guilt and disappointment, so close behind him that the Indian's blanket was disarranged by the sudden movement. The sentinel anticipating the assassin's design before he was ready to act, was too quick for him. The long, sharp-pointed, double-edged hunting knife, he no doubt intended to bury in Abbott's person from behind, and other weapons were taken from him, and he with others was placed in irons.

Involuntarily Abbott's stern look—for he had never before heard a sentinel use profane language when challenging, though the strain was so great it was perfectly natural here—as he first glanced up, with the impression for the moment that the demand was for some reason addressed to him, caused the sentry to say, apologetically, as soon as the danger had passed: "Captain, that Indian was so queer and sly in his movements, I feared he was trying to get near you unobserved for no good purpose," or words to that effect. As the Indian had tried the same thing, with his blanket similarly arranged, when sent for the evening previous, unknown to the sentry, and had been overbearing and insolent,—so much so that Abbott had to put his hand forcibly against the Indian's breast, push him back and sternly order him to halt as he rapidly and defiantly approached with the look of a demon—which no one but an Indian can so terrifyingly assume,—Abbott has always thought the sentinel's fears were well grounded. Without doubt the sentry prevented a tragedy. At any rate Abbott's heart is sincerely filled with grateful emotion to that old soldier, whenever he thinks of it. Still, there were doubtless those who thought Little Captain's arrest was without danger, and of little account,—the do-nothing, envious critics with which every period is afflicted in all occupations.

The situation was so critical that the Government guide and interpreter, Spencer, a nery man who had married into the tribe many years before, was greatly alarmed. He voluntarily said to Abbott, after arriving and consulting with the Indians, who outnumbered the command five to one. that he had never seen the tribe in such an ugly spirit; that he anticipated serious trouble, and deplored Abbott's fixed determination to make the arrests at all hazards, with such a small command. But what else could a soldier do but obey orders? That was what Abbott was there for, what he was specially selected by Gen. Willcox to do, what he was paid by the government for doing, and it had to be done or his reputation would suffer. He would be accused of lack of nerve and judgment not to do so, for it was a tribe of usually fairly peaceable Indians who lived in and about the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, but who did not take kindly to the arrest, placing in irons and punishment of an old chief. The situation was extremely critical, and with Abbott's knowledge of the Indian characteristic to act disastrously on impulse, it was a great relief when the arrest was over, and especially the following morning when the other Indians to be arrested, one of whom lived in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, sent word they were en route to give themselves up.

Little Captain, when first sent for by the Author at the scene of arrest, adroitly sent back word that he would surrender the following day; but suspecting he wanted to gain time either to fortify or to go further away into some inaccessible place, and not feeling disposed to be dictated to by an outlaw under the circumstances, Abbott in the most positive way — as the least sign of timidity would be fatal — emphatically shaking his finger in the would-be defiant and insolent assassin's face, each meantime mutually stubbornly and defiantly looking the other in the eyes at close range — and an Indian has the most terrifying, savagely wild, demoralizing and dangerous look when in anger, of anything brute or human — directed him, as he was the courier, to return instantly to Little Captain and inform him that if he did not report to Abbott by midnight he would take his command, go for him and shoot him and his followers on sight; and thus his other associates in crime elsewhere learned to respect a determined government official's authority, and afterwards nearly tumbled over each other to surrender. These were not placed in irons. The tribe needed no further disciplining.

He was at Ft. Apache, A. T., commanding his troop, scouting for hostile Indians, etc., from May to November, 1882, and was in the fight with White Mountain Apache Indians, having a man shot on either side of him, near enough to be touched, in an assault conceived and led by him at the Big Dry Wash of the Little Colorado River, A. T., July 17, 1882. For this he received honorable mention by Gen. A. W. Evans, U. S. A., who commanded the expedition, in his official report of the fight, for which Abbott was afterwards breveted, owing to an effective flank movement executed by his troop through heavy timber, underbrush, deep precipitous canyons, and over rough and dangerous ground in the Mogollon Mountains, at great risk of being ambushed, and which resulted, after a spirited charge in the enemy's rear, in virtually surrounding, and finally, together with the cooperation of the rest of the command, in severely punishing the hostiles and ending the campaign.

Reaching the battlefield on the great Mogollon mesa, amid the breaks of the Little Colorado River, a tributary of the Colorado running through the Grand Canyon not far distant, with similar precipitous banks, he received the indefinite order at the beginning of the attack, as understood by him, to move to the left with Troop K, across a small canyon about a half mile away. On arriving on an elevation overlooking the battlefield, in the midst of the great mountain forest and nest of formidable canyons, it was discovered that he was not only too far away from the Indians to do effective work, but if too hard pressed they would escape through the head of the canyon they were in where it debouched from its boxlike formation, unless taken in their rear. The main canyon dividing the belligerent forces was about 1,500 feet deep, with its slanting sides so precipitous in places for twenty feet or more, that except with great loss of time in picking his way, one could only descend by grasping the overhanging brush and sliding pell-mell down the smooth rocky sides, landing in a heap, all battered and torn, on a narrow shelf at the foot, and thus on in places to the bottom of the great gorge.

The smaller canyon already passed was also of rugged formation, its passage being blocked by boulders, underbrush, huge fallen trees, etc., the accumulation of ages. To send for permission to take his troop across the main canyon to the rear of the hostiles meant the loss of precious time, in which the Indians would probably escape, and it was found afterwards that some of them had already fled on the arrival of Troop K at the head of the canyon, where a medicine man, a squaw and a boy about 12 years old were captured and sent to Gen. Evans: these were the only uninjured prisoners taken during the fight. It was a critical moment in time of battle, when everything depended on quick action. To make the movement with one small troop of dismounted cavalry might mean annihilation, or, if defeated with any considerable loss of men, censure and possibly a court-martial; and not to do it might possibly mean the same.* But the movement was successfully made.

The assault on the Indians' stone breastworks, hastily thrown up, was made in the shape of the letter V, in order to keep the Indians from flanking and getting in rear of the troop, the Author leading at the point or angle of the V, where he could see what was ahead so as not attack rashly an overwhelming number if the Indians should unite and concentrate their fire and

* This is one of the lotteries in an Army officer's life: maligners of the Army, when inclined for partisan or other purposes to abuse the professional soldier on the trumped-up false reports of malicious and over-credulous persons, or of prejudiced, unscrupulous enlisted men, a certain per cent. of whom, unlike those of the Civil War, are utterly unreliable, do not take into consideration, but pretend to be shocked and surprised that, notwithstanding the officer's army career is full of such trying situations, some unfortunate fellow whose record for many years has been without a mistake should make one, — just one seeming mistake, — for which his merciless critics worse than thanklessly send him, a proud spirit, jealous of his honor and good name, quite broken-hearted but still too manly to acknowledge it, to what he considers an unhonored grave. Ah, may the Infinite have mercy on such assassins!

charge on Troop K, the assaulting column, without immediate support. The two men wounded, one on either side of Abbott in the charge, were shot through the body above the abdomen, but survived and were afterwards discharged for disability on account of their wounds, and sent to the Soldiers' Home at Washington.

This was the first fight 2d Lieut. (now Maj. Q. M. D., U. S. A.) F. G. Hodgeson, Troop K, 6th U. S. Cav., was in, after his graduation from West Point; and to be for the first time under severe fire is a great trial, which he bore as creditably as he had ever borne the various duties he was called upon to perform after joining his troop, which is saying a great deal, as he was the most faithful, conscientious duty officer the Author ever served with, in his own or any other command.

In the second assault, assisted by Capt. O. D. King's troop of the 3d U. S. Cav., which after K Troop's first charge in the enemy's rear, had joined it, — Abbott commanding the squadron — Private Foley of K Troop was seriously wounded through the neck, the bullet just grazing the jugular vein, and Capt. King's 1st Sergeant was shot through the arm. The men of both troops behaved finely in the last assault, and K Troop gallantly in the first one. In the many assaults participated in by the Author during the Civil War, none was ever made under such trying circumstances as the first one in the rear of these Indians, with no known support within immediate helping distance, for defeat meant no quarter and possibly a massacre; nor was a more gallant, determined lot of men ever led in battle. Every man realized the importance of doing his part, and did it like gallant soldiers as they were. Three of Troop K, Privates Witt, Foley and another man whose name is forgotten, were afterwards awarded on Abbott's recommendation, Certificates of Merit for gallantry in battle, signed by the President, preferring them to the Medal of Honor, as the former insured them $2 per month additional pay so long as they remained in service, which they intended to do until honorably retired from active duty in old age, provided their wounds did not prevent them from doing so.

Some time after the General Order was issued by Gen. Willcox complimenting the command — composed of five troops of cavalry and the Indian scouts — for its work in the fight, and favorably mentioning several officers by name, including Abbott, a letter voluntarily written to him by Capt. H. L. Haskell (now Brig. Gen. ret'd.), an aide-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Willcox, volunteered the information that if the part taken by Troop K, 6th Cavalry, in the fight, or to that effect, had been known, an entirely different complimentary Order would have been issued. Inasmuch as no complaint was ever thought of, and much less made, by Abbott, in regard to the matter, — for the affair seemed quite small when compared to his Civil War experiences, — the letter was highly satisfactory, but not as much so, of course, as the acknowledgment indicated would have been, if announced in General Orders to the troops of the Department by Gen. Willcox.

INDEX.

The same name although indexed but once may appear several times on the same page. Only adults are indexed except in the early generations. The figures following the name refer to the page where the name will be found. Middle names are indicated by initials only; for example, Emma Jane and Emma Julia are each indexed under Emma J. When the context or other information shows that the surname is the maiden name, the initial only is used in the Index without being parenthesized. A dash in place of a given or surname shows that it is not known. When parenthesized initials follow a name, it indicates that the person is referred to in either way in the text. When a surname is given without Christian names, two or more of that surname will be found on the page indicated, and this surname does not occur elsewhere. For example, see below, Abdill 870; on turning to page 870 the reader will find all of that surname mentioned in the volume.
